Strike Move By President This Week Is Forecast

White House Again Denies Plan; High Official Declares Economy in 'Havoc'

By Sam Stavisky
Post Reporter

Reports persisted yesterday that President Truman would intervene in the coal and steel strikes if the walkouts are not settled by the end of the week.

A high Government official, who refused to be identified, said yesterday that "we can't let this thing go beyond this week. It is getting out of hand and playing havoc with the economy."

Flies to New York

However, there was no official confirmation of the reports. At the White House, Charles Ross, the President's press secretary, reiterated his almost daily statement that the President has no plans to move into the dual strike picture.

Meanwhile, Cyrus S. Ching, United States conciliation chief, redirected his steel strike peace efforts at U. S. Steel, the industry's pace-setter.

Ching and his top aides flew to New York yesterday and immediately resumed week-long discussions—broken only long enough for Ching to report to the White House—with representatives of the Nation's No. 1 steel producer.

After a three-hour meeting there, the top Federal mediator sent out his assistant, William N. Margolis, who declined comment on most questions by reporters. He did say there will be another meeting today (10 a. m.)

Would Question Fact Finders

Philip Murray, president of the CIO Steelworkers, who have been out since Ocober 1 in a demand for noncontributory pensions and social insurance, is due in New York today to speak at a political rally. Ching plans to have a conference with Murray before the latter returns to Cleveland for the CIO convention. Associates of Ching said the conciliation director was not optimistic about the steel talks, but that, despite the continuing deadlock, neither was he discouraged.

A group of small steel producers yesterday urged recall of the steel fact-finding board to obtain clarifi-

Bidault Will Seek To Be Confirmed As Premier Today

Paris, Oct. 26 (AP).—Georges Bidault tonight announced he will ask the National Assembly Thursday for confirmation as Premier.

He added that he expects to outline his program and have an agreement on the cabinet that will administer it.

His optimism grew out of pledges of support from the Socialists and Radical Socialists. These two parties, along with Bidault's Popular Republican Movement (MRP), are the three main groups of the central coalition that has been governing France for nearly three years.

It was understood the other parties also had agreed on division of cabinet positions. This wrecked the efforts of two men before Bidault.

Jules Moch, Socialist, failed because he could not get the help of Bidault's party. Rene Mayer, Radical Socialist, stumbled over Socialist insistence that Daniel Mayer (no relation) be named Minister of Labor. Daniel Mayer forced resignation of the Queuille government on October 6 by insisting on wage increases.

$17,500 GWU Purchase . . .

Original Gilbert Stuart portrait of George Washington bought at auction

An original full-length Gilbert Stuart portrait of George Washington has been purchased for $17,500 by the university that bears his name.

Dr. Cloyd H. Marvin, president of George Washington University, announced yesterday that the purchase was made at auction Tuesday by John Russell Mason, curator of art and librarian of the university. It was part of the estate of the late Walter Jennings, wealthy oil man of Cold Spring Harbor, Long Island.

The Stuart portrait, 94 inches tall and 58 inches wide, is the first original Washington portrait owned by the university. It will be delivered next week, Dr. Marvin said, and will be hung in the main reading room of the library at 2033 G st. nw.

The picture probably was painted in Philadelphia about 1800. As late as 1916, when it was sold by a William Macbeth, it was believed to be the work of John Vanderlyn. After a thorough cleaning job was performed, it was generally acknowledged by critics and art experts that the portrait was one of many painted of Washington by Stuart.

New British Crisis Is Near, Eden Warns

By Ned Russell

London, Oct. 26 (NYHT) Anthony Eden, deputy leader of the Conservative Party, charged in the House of Commons today that the Labor Government's $784,000,000 economy program fails to meet the nations needs and warned another crisis will come in "not so many months."

Eden launched the Conservative attack on the government's program after Sir Stafford Cripps, Chancellor of the Exchequer, had opened a two-day debate in Commons with a lengthy defense and detailed breakdown of the government's plans.

Sir Stafford also announced two important technical adjuncts to Britain's emergency economy policy.

The first was a decision to restrict drastically any further loans or credits to other countries. The second was a decision to slow down sharply the rate of payment of various wartime sterling debts that are being paid off generally in the form of exports that yield no monetary or material gain.

The second decision will force many British exporters to switch to the American and Canadian markets. The first decision is intended to make sterling as short—and hard—as possible in the world.

While defending the economy program, Sir Stafford admitted that none of the government's recent emergency measures, including devaluation, will alone solve the nation's critical economic problem. The fate of the country, he said, lies in the hands of the workers and employers who must work harder.

The program of cuts, which include savings of 84 million dollars

Guard Facing Early Action In Next War

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

Montgomery, Ala., Oct. 26—General Omar Bradley told National Guard leaders here today that their units must be prepared to fight overseas almost immediately in another war.

The chairman of the joint chiefs of staff said the North Atlantic Pact put the Guard "in the international picture" and therefore the "whole philosophy and background" of its training has been changed.

"We recognize that the defense forces of the United States must take their stand in Europe, if that is where aggression begins," Bradley told the National Guard Association's 71st annual convention.

The National Guard should be ready to move some divisions to combat areas upon short notice in the event of mobilization".

At a press conference later, Bradley explained this would involve a sharp departure from World Wars I and II. Then Guard divisions were given extensive training before going overseas and were radically changed by taking out their commissioned and noncommissioned personnel to form "cadres" of new units.

Meanwhile, in backstage conferences Air Guard officers lined up almost unanimously behind the older ground force Guard generals on the two main controversies of the convention. At a closed meeting of the State adjutants general and senior State Air Guard officers today, it was learned that the following proposals were adopted without dissent:

1. A motion backing Guard chiefs

'District Building Blues'

PUC to Lend an Ear Today To Streetcar Music Dispute

This is the day of the big jam session in the District Building—a verbal potpourri of hotly discordant views about the radio music in Washington streetcars and buses.

Some think the music's spinach. Others are sent.

Both sides will get in their hot licks starting at 10 a. m. in the fifth-floor Board Room of the District Building.

They'll toss their brickbats and bouquets to the District Public Utilities Commission. The PUC can decide for or against music in Capital Transit vehicles or approve a compromise, like marking the musical ones.

The hearing may last more than a day. There is no expectation of an immediate PUC verdict and whatever one is made is slated for appeal through legal channels.

For this municipal issue has aroused the savage beast in the hearts of many normally peaceful Washington citizens. Their letters to the PUC have drawn the issue in bitter terms.

Letters from 292 persons oppose the radio music, and 255 favor it. Three citizens' associations oppose, 11 favor; the GAO local of NFFE with 400 members favor it, so do the National Associations of Postal Clerks and Letter Carriers.

Denfeld Ouster Talk Mounting

Reported Successor, Adm. Sherman, Due Here Today, Says Johnson Assistant

By Marshall Andrews
Post Reporter

Col. Paul H. Griffith, Assistant Secretary of Defense, gave more substance last night to reports current in Washington that Admiral Forest T. Sherman, commander of the Mediterranean Feet may succeed Admiral Louis Denfeld as Chief of Naval Operations.

Griffith, in an address before an adult lecture group at the Chevy Chase Community bldg., 5601 Connecticut ave. nw., disclosed that Sherman will arrive in Washington today or Friday.

He did not reveal the purpose of Sherman's forthcoming visit, but indicated Sherman was one of a group of Navy officers who disagree with high brass of the service on the Navy's position under the unification setup. He also indicated Sherman was one of a group of such "disagreeing" officers who were prevented by the high brass from testifying before the House Armed Service Committee hearings recently.

Scores "Disloyal Brass"

Griffith also charged that Navy Capt. John G. Crommelin, an air officer, was "not alone" when he gave out to press associations copies of secret Navy correspondence attacking budgetary and other pressures on the Navy's air arm. Griffith said Crommelin's act was part of a "concerted effort."

"Our official information is," Griffith said, "that it was not one party alone. Some of the top brass have been disloyal and that is disloyalty to unification, which is the law of the land.

"A number of officers were brought to Washington who wouldn't testify as the Navy wanted. They were not allowed to testify before the House Armed Services Committee. Others were not allowed to come here at all."

Questioned after his talk, Griffith then indicated Sherman was one of the latter group.

More Unification Promised

He also said that "I don't want to imply that the cutbacks of 135,000 employes in the Defense (department) setup will be the end of such cutbacks."

He disclosed that communications systems of the Navy, Army, and Air Force will soon be unified and then operated at a cost one half as much as previously. He said that "disunity, disturbance, and disbelief" such as in the steel and coal strikes, are "what the Russians are trying to promote."

Griffith is assistant to Louis Johnson, Secretary of Defense. Both are former national commanders of the American Legion.

Defense Secretary Johnson and Secretary of State Acheson met yesterday with President Truman, but Johnson said later it was a "State Department matter" and not "a headline matter." Johnson and Navy Secretary Mathews had met with President Truman Tuesday after a Pentagon session

Soviet Blocks A-Controls, 5 Nations Say

Russians Putting Sovereignty Ahead Of World Security, U. N. Report States

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

Five nations reported yesterday to the U.N. General Assembly that Russia, rejecting any infringement on its "rigid exercise of unimpeded state sovereignty," makes international control of atomic energy impossible.

The declaration was made by representatives of Canada, China, France, the United Kingdom and the United States. They, with Russia, constitute the six so-called "Sponsoring Powers" which have been trying to reach agreement on a control plan in the United Nations Atomic Energy Commission.

Their comments, made public here and at Lake Success, accompanied a summary of discussions which have been going on since last August. They, said Russia refused to negotiate on any but the Russian proposals.

National Ownership

Yet these proposals, the other five found, insist on national ownership of nuclear explosives, national operation of atomic plants and only periodic inspection of those plants by an international agency.

But effective control to prohibit the manufacture and concealment of atomic weapons under such a system is impossible, the five nations declared. This is because of the nature of the process of making nuclear materials, in which accounting is enormously difficult and not perfected, and where the conversion from peaceful to war uses "can take place rapidly and without warning."

Therefore, the report stated, "The Soviet proposals would not only fail to provide the security required but would be so inadequate as to be dangerous. They would delude the peoples of the world into thinking that atomic energy was being controlled when in fact it was not."

The nub of the matter, the five nations inferred, is national sovereignty. "If this fundamental difference could be overcome," they said, "other differences which now seem unsurmountable could be seen in their true perspective and reasonable ground might be found for adjusting them."

International Control

The majority plan, based on principles originally suggested in the spring of 1946 by the Acheson-Lilienthal report, calls for an international agency controlling atomic plants throughout the world and operating a rigorous inspection system. No nation would operate its own atomic plants. After the international agency assumed control, no nation would make or possess atomic weapons.

But, the five nations reported, the Soviet representative argued that to confer such powers on an international agency "would constitute a gross infringement of national sovereignty and would permit the international agency to interfere in the internal economy of individual nations."

They said that "it was indefen-

Soviets Call Ex-U. S. Opera Star An American Spy in Belgrade

Moscow, Oct. 26 (AP).—A Belgrade dispatch to the Literary Gazette today said Zinka Kunc, a former Metropolitan Opera soprano who was married in Washington, D. C., is an American spy often seen with Marshal Tito.

"This woman married Yugoslav Trotskyite General Ilich in the United States and thus got into Yugoslavia," the account said. "Expensive diamonds are given her by Tito.

"She is a dictator of fashions for the wives of ministers and generals."

These declarations were part of a long story accusing Tito and his lieutenants of enriching themselves at the expense of the nation. The Premier and his closest aides were declared depositing funds in Swiss banks against the day when they "will have to flee the wrath of the people."

(In Belgrade, plump and pretty Zinka Kunc, tonight laughed off the Russian charge she is an American spy. "It's just silly," she said.)

The Literary Gazette's writer, who signed the name V. Stoyanovic, said he saw a notice posted by the Belgrade underground that Tito is spending 30 million dinars

H. I. Fischbach Heads House Staff Probing Law Enforcement

By Edward F. Ryan
Post Reporter

Hyman I. Fischbach, 41, New York attorney, was named yesterday to head the staff for the House District subcommittee investigating crime and law enforcement in Washington.

Fischbach will be chief counsel for the subcommittee, headed by Representative James C. Davis (D., Ga.).

He is a veteran of previous Congressional investigations. He served several years with the select House committee investigating executive agencies. That group was headed by Representative Howard W. Smith (D., Va.), now a member of the Davis Crime Investigating subcommittee.

In his service with the Smith committee, he worked on the investigations of the Office of Price Administration, the Federal Home Loan Bank Administration, and the National Labor Relations Board and War Labor Board.

As part of his private law practice, he is genetal counsel of the National Retail Dry Goods Association.

He served, too, with the House Expenditures Committee in the last Congress in its investigation of racketeering in the Philadelphia produce markets. His service with the Smith committee investigation began in 1942 and ended in 1947.

A native of New York City, Fischbach was graduated from Colby College in Waterville, Me., and received his law degree from the St. Lawrence University Law School in Brooklyn, N. Y.

He was admitted to the bar in New York in 1930. He is a member of the Federal Bar Association and of the bar of the United States Supreme Court.

He is married, and has a daughter, Marilyn, 14.

Davis announced Fischbach's appointment in a morning off-the-record meeting with representatives of the four Washington daily

Minimum Pay Bill Signed By President

Measure in Effect 90 Days From Now; 1,500,000 to Get Raise

By The Associated Press

Hailing it as a "major victory" for his Administration, President Truman yesterday signed the bill increasing the national minimum wage from 40 cents to 75 cents an hour.

Coverage of the act is subject to interpretation of the Wage-Hour Administration and the courts. The Federal jurisdiction extends only to those activities which are found to be in interstate commerce.

The new minimum—expected to cost employers about 300 million dollars annually—does not go into effect, however, until 90 days from now. At that time an estimated 1,500,000 workers are due to have from 5 to 15 cents added to their hourly earnings.

Government officials said the pay raise in most cases will not exceed 15 cents, since they said most workers now are receiving more than the old 40 cent-an-hour minimum.

The new Fair Labor Standards Act, which was adopted just before Congress adjourned, makes various changes in the old law which went into effect just 11 years ago last Monday.

Mr. Truman expressed "regret" that the new version will take some of the 22,600,000 persons now covered off the lists. But he said "the improvements made by the new law will go far toward achieving our basic purpose of assuring minimum labor standards necessary for health, efficiency and general well being of workers."

Among the "improvements" he cited the following:

1. Tightening of the child labor clause which he said should result "in the virtual elimination of the evil of child labor from our interstate and foreign trade and industry."

2. A provision authorizing the wage-hour administrator to bring suit on behalf of a worker for unpaid back wages. Mr. Truman said this "should greatly improve the effective enforcement of the law."

In his statement, Mr. Truman summed up the new legislation as

'Wage Board' Employes In Defense Affected

6-Cent Increase Is Given Those Who Aren't Covered By Classification Act

Pay raises averaging about 6 cents an hour for 18,000 "wage board" employes in Greater Washington were announced yesterday by the Army, Navy and Air Force.

All employes in industrial and maintenance work not covered by the Civil Service Classification Act of 1923, as amended, will be affected, it was announced. Their pay is determined by specially constituted wage boards.

Covers 45 Installations

Persons in laundry and commissary services will not be affected, however.

The order covers 45 "activities" in Greater Washington—that is, workers at 45 installations, such as the naval Gun Factory, Bolling Air Force Base and the Army Medical Center.

The new wage schedules, which are expected to become effective within 30 days, are the result of recent pay adjustments in the railroad industry and their effect on pay rates in the area.

About 10,000 of the 18,000 workers are employed at Navy installations. The remainder are divided between the Army and the Air Force.

The average increase of about 6 cents an hour is equal to a 4 percent raise, the announcement said.

Installations Listed

Installations affected are in Washington unless otherwise noted and include the David Taylor Model Basin, Carderock, Md.; Marine Barracks, Arlington, Va. (Henderson Hall); Marine Barricks, National Naval Medical Center, Bethesda, Md.; Naval Air Station, Anacostia; Naval Code and Signal Laboratory; Naval Communications Station, 3801 Nebraska ave. nw.; Naval Dispensary, Naval Gun Factory, Naval Observatory, Naval Ordnance Stock Office, Naval Photographic Center, Anacostia; Naval Radio Station, Arlington; Naval Radio Station, Cheltenham, Md.; Naval Receiving Station, Anacostia; Naval Records Management Center, Arlington; Naval Research Laboratory, Anacostia; Naval Reserve Training Publications Project, Naval Gun Factory; Naval Hydrographic Office, Suitland, Md.; Potomac River Naval Command, Naval Ordnance Laboratory, White Oak, Md.; Naval Ordnance Plant, Alexandria; Army Quartermaster Detachment (Carpenter Shop and Garage); Alexandria National Cemetery, Arlington National Cemetery, Army Medical Center, Army Security Agency, Army War College, Bolling Air Force Base, Washington National Airport, Fort Myer, Va., Headquarters, Military District of Washington; South Post, Fort Myer, Va.; Fort Belvoir, Va.; Soldiers' Home National Cemetery; United States Engineer Office, Washington Quartermaster Depot, Army Map Service, Andrews Air Force Base, Army Institute of Pathology, Arlington Hall Station, Signal Corps Photo Library and Laboratory, Beach Erosion Board, Army Medical Library, Army Command and Administrative Communication Agency.

Extra-Large Eggs Drop 6c; New York Stocks Hit New High

New York, Oct. 26 (U.P.).—Stocks rose to new highs on the New York Stock Exchange today—just 20 years after the worst stock market panic in history.

Paced by industrial issues, the general market average rose to the highest mark since the day after President Truman's election.

The increase in market value of all listed stocks approached half a billion dollars.

Market experts attributed the rise to recurrent rumors of possible breaks in the steel and coal strikes and to the possibility President Truman would invoke the Taft-Hartley law to break the stalemate.

At Chicago, one load of prime steers brought a new 1949 price record in a cattle market where prices moved in both directions today.

The top was $41.50 a hundred pounds, up $1.50 from yesterday and only 10 cents under the all-time peak made in September, 1948.

Steers grading medium, good and low choice, which comprised the bulk of offerings, sold steady to 50 cents lower than yesterday.

(Related Story on Page 16)

Extra-large eggs took a near record six-cent drop yesterday in most Washington area grocery stores, while wholesale coffee prices continued to spiral on the New York exchange.

Several District food store managers reported that some housewives, bracing themselves against a possible coffeeless breakfast, yesterday bought two instead of the usual one pound of coffee.

But no one in the trade saw any signs of a "run" in anticipation of a coffee, shortage or "luxury level' prices.

The local six-cent decline in extra-large eggs reflected a simultaneous four-to-seven cent drop in wholesale egg prices across the Nation, according to the New York Mercantile Exchange. The dip, bringing the decline to 16 cents for the last eight days, is seasonal and due chiefly to heavy receipt of eggs, poultry spokesmen explained.

The food chains cut extra-large white eggs from 77 to 71 cents. Medium eggs generally dropped 1 cent to 54 cents.

While coffee futures continued to soar in New York, there were the first signs yesterday that the

Two Others Killed

W. J. Neal, Deputy REA Chief, Dies in New Mexico Auto Crash

William J. Neal, deputy administrator of the Rural Electrification Administration since 1943, was killed yesterday in an auto accident in southern New Mexico.

The Associated Press reported that the accident, which occurred about 29 miles west of Las Cruces, was a head-on collision.

Also killed in the crash were Ted C. Perry, 55, of Safford, Ariz., an employe of the United States Department of Agriculture, and Charles M. Bostick, 50, of Peoria, Ill.

Neal and Perry had been attending the three-State REA convention in El Paso, Tex., and were en route to Safford. Neal spoke at the convention yesterday.

Mrs. Perry was injured in the accident, and was taken to a Las Cruces hospital. Neal, who was 44 years old, was Democratic candidate for Governor in traditionally Republican New Hampshire in 1942. He commuted between his farm near Plymouth, N. H. and Washington, living here at the Hotel Continental.

His political career started in 1927, and lasted through 1935. He held various local offices before becoming a member of the New Hampshire Legislature in 1933. This led to such positions as Fourth Polio Case Starts Probe on Southern Ave. S.E.

Prince Georges County Sanitary Engineer Montgomery Morrow began a thorough survey into an apartment-development in the 2600 block of Southern ave. se., after the fourth case of polio was reported there yesterday.

The latest victim is a 30-year-old man who was stricken Sunday and admitted to Gallinger Hospital Tuesday. He was the county's forty-ninth case of the year.

Morrow said yesterday his survey would seek to determine whether any condition exists in the development which may be spreading the disease.

One of the four victims, 27-year-old attorney Lorne S. Birch, died of the disease in Gallinger Hospital October 11.

House Unit Hears Monopoly Charges

Olds Blames Profit 'Fury' Of Utilities

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

Former Federal Power Commissioner Leland Olds yesterday said his much-criticized writings 20 years ago about the "political influence of the great corporations" had little to do with his recent Senate defeat for reappointment.

Rather, it was due largely to the "positive fury" of the private utilities for profit, Olds told a luncheon meeting of the American Veterans Committee here.

In his first public statement since the Senate turned thumbs down on a third term, Olds said "they (the private utilities) were afraid that the bonanza profits might be taken out of their hands" if he stayed on the job.

"They saw profits being taken away so that they could not have homes big enough to entertain the whole Texas Legislature at one clip," he said.

Commenting on his concept of Government regulation of public utilities—"the real issue involved in the Senate fight"—Olds suggested:

"We might have the Government—which has considerable reserves of oil and gas in addition to the tremendous tidelands reserves under its control—instead of leasing this property, set up its own operations to provide a yardstick by which it can determine what is a reasonable return."

Throughout his talk to the veterans' group, Olds stressed the need for such "public competition" as an effective way of breaking private monopoly price-fixing.

"I have always supported the idea of valley authorities as a means of accomplishing economic decentralization. The basin programs," he said, "will stimulate private enterprise to go into business on a regional basis to compete with nationally organized industry."

Olds blasted the Republicans for attempting to "recapture control of the Government by branding even the most conservative members of the Democratic Party as Communists."

A charge that 33 large manufacturing engineers have formed an association receiving 92 percent of all ECA manufacturing engineering—amounting to an estimated 200 million dollars annually—was brought before House monopoly investigators yesterday.

Dr. Derso Shybekay of Minneapolis, president of the National Council of Professional Industrial Engineers, told the subcommittee headed by Representative Emanuel Celler (D., N. Y.) that the other 6000 engineering firms in the Nation haven't a "Chinaman's chance" of landing these ECA contracts.

Celler said he would refer the charge to the Department of Justice for investigation.

Shybekay testified that when United States missions go to ECA countries, they take with them only a list of members of the association to recommend as manufacturing engineers.

He handed to the committee printed copies of the list which he said the United States missions use.

The list contained the names of large engineering concerns, including Stone-Webster Engineering Corp. and Robert Heller and Associates.

The Minneapolis engineer charged that the "favored" firms had "frozen' their membership with a $1000 initiation fee and annual dues of $250.

In addition, he declared, a vote by only two members could "blackball" any applicant and prevent his getting on the list.

Representatives of ECA will be called during the inquiry into the charges, Celler told reporters.

At the morning session, Peter M. Maitland, representing the Van Brode Milling Co., Clinton Mass., testified that his firm was the only small manufacturer of breakfast foods left in the business, and is rapidly being pushed to the wall by the Kellogg company.

If his company is finally forced out of business, Maitland declared, the Government will have to pay two and one-half million dollars more for its cereals.

To prove that point, he cited the price of one brand of cereal in which his company does not compete. In this case, he declared, Kellogg and the other cereal manufacturers are charging the Government the full commercial price.

Kellogg, he said, is now reducing its prices to the Government below actual cost in order to squeeze his company out of business.

Maitland suggested that the Robinson-Patman Act should be applied to Government business by requiring cereal manufacturers to sell at the same price to all buyers for the same grade and quality of merchandise.

He added that if this were done his company and other new small cereal manufacturers would be able to get government business and besides to enter the private brand business for the chain stores.

Maitland said he believed the Justice Department had all the facts on the way the small manufacturers were being squeezed in the cereal business.

$820 Million 2-Yr. Crop Aid Cost Forecast

By Ovid A. Martin
Associated Press Reporter

The Government is forecasting that it will cost about 820 million dollars to support farm prices during a two-year period ending June 30, 1951.

By costs is meant the amount of money the Government will lose on surplus products that it will buy at support price levels and sell or dispose of at lower prices. The period covers largely the 1949 and 1950 crops.

This loss estimate does not take into account the profit or loss the Government may mark up when it finally disposes of surpluses still in its possession at the end of the two-year period. It expects to hold large quantities of cotton, corn, wheat, dairy products, and oil-seed crops at that time.

Budget Report of CCC

This financial outlook is pictured in a budget report of the Commodity Credit Corporation, the Agriculture Department's price supporting agency.

The report estimates losses for the current fiscal year ending next June 30 at about 370 million dollars, and 450 million dollars for the following fiscal year.

The loss estimates this fiscal year by commodities include: corn 20 million dollars; cotton $8,291,000; peanuts $30,019,000; rice $132,000; tobacco none; wheat $49,850,000; potatoes $58,900,000; wool $10,817,000; barley $6,134,000; dry beans $1,500,000; American-Egyptian cotton $9000.

Cottonseed six million dollars; eggs $87,680,000; flaxseed $13,312,000; Naval stores—resin and turpentine—$248,000; oats $2,087,000; dry peas $624,000; grain sorghums $9,574,000; soybeans $2,341,000; sweet potatoes $85,000; and pork 65 million dollars.

Next Year's Forecast

Losses forecast for the next fiscal year include: corn $26,400,000; cotton $54,302,000; peanuts $13,604,000; rice $2,622,000; wheat $65,750,000; potatoes $106,175,000; wool $16,856,000; barley eight million dollars; dry beans $5,043,000; American-Egyptian cotton $21,000.

Cottonseed $2,520,000, eggs $80,000; flaxseed $30,899,000; Naval stores $285,000; grain sorghums $14,250,000; and pork 104 million dollars.

The Government is permitted to sell the surplus abroad at cut-rate prices, or to divert it into by-product uses at low prices or to turn it over to relief agencies, charitable institutions and the national school lunch program.

Minimum Wage Act Signed

a "major victory in our fight to promote the general welfare of the people of the United States."

The President signed the measure at a White House ceremony attended by labor leaders and Government officials. Among those present were AFL President William Green, Secretary of Labor Tobin, Senator Elbert Thomas (D., Utah), chairman of the Senate Labor Committee. CIO President Philip Murray, who is attending a union convention in Cleveland, was represented by Jacob Potofsky, head of the CIO Clothing Workers, and Emil Rieve, head of the CIO Textile Workers.

Even before the President had signed the new bill into law, Rieve called on his 450,000 textile union members to "renew our campaign for an increase in the Federal minimum to $1 an hour."

"Even that figure," he added in a statement, "can barely provide a subsistence standard of living."

The House voted to exempt 1,005,000 persons now covered, while the Senate cut that figure to about 200,000.

The new measure specifically exempts:

1. Employes on small newspapers, including dailies, with a circulation of 4,000 copies or less in the county of publication and adjoining counties.

2. Newspaperboys who deliver papers to the reader.

3. Sawmill and logging operations in the woods. But processing and other inside operations are not exempt.

4. Small Western Union agencies doing less than $500 business each month and telephone switchboard operators in exchanges with less than 750 stations.

5. Employes of taxicab operators; workers engaged in the first processing of buttermilk; employes of carriers by air who are not subject to the provisions of the Railway Retirement Act; irrigation workers on non-profit projects used exclusively for the supplying and storing of water for agricultural purposes.

6. Retail establishments which manufacture the goods they sell, Provided: (a) Employes of such concerns work on the same premises as the retail establishment, and nor more than 15 percent of the goods sold by the firm move in interstate commerce.

7. Retail or service establishments generally if over 50 percent of their annual dollar volume of sales is made within the State.

8. Laundries and other places which clean and repair clothing or fabrics, provided: over 50 percent of the annual dollar volume of sales is made within the State and 75 percent of such volume is derived from sales to customers who are not in the mining, transportation, manufacturing or communications business.

tense green coffee-bean market was beginning to calm down.

Locally, retail coffee prices have held the line since Monday's 2-cent-a-pound boost. On the New York coffee exchange contracts were actually being traded yesterday, whereas in recent days there had been no offers—only a flood of buying orders.

A more ominous story came from a leading coffee wholesaler here. He said his New York supplier yesterday morning quoted him another eight-cent hike on an order he had placed.

Truman Signs Alaska Rail Survey Bill

President Truman yesterday signed a bill empowering him to seek an agreement with Canada for a survey of a proposed railway linking the United States with its defense outposts in Alaska.

The survey would cover a 1400-mile gap between the existing railway systems of Alaska and British Columbia.

If Canada agrees to it, Mr. Truman is authorized to have the survey made, plans drawn and costs estimated. As the Senate Foreign Relations Committee pointed out in approving the measure, it does not commit anyone to build the railroad. But the Senators said it will provide "a firm basis of fact on which a decision to close this gap must be made."

Other measures approved yesterday by Mr. Truman included:

A bill increasing the equipment maintenance allowance for rural mail carriers from 7 to 8 cents a mile.

Five bills authorizing the issuance of revenue bonds in Hawaii.

No Word on Chennault Since Return to China

Maj. Gen. Claire Chennault has returned to Hongkong to resume active direction of the Chinese air transport line which he heads, Washington associates said last night.

Chennault, who headed the famous "Flying Tigers," left Washington early this month and has not been heard from since his return to China. They said the airline is still operating despite huge Communist gains in China.

Plan to Alter Promotions Under Study

By Bert Andrews
NYHT News Service

Military circles were stirred yesterday by news that a study has been ordered of a proposal to give the Secretary of Defense unprecedented power to make "spot" promotions to certain key jobs in the National Military Establishment.

The first reports were that the plan was so sweeping that it envisioned legislation to permit the Secretary to make promotions at will in the Army, Navy and Air Force without regard to the whole system of advancement by seniority and fitness reports.

Subsequent—and accurate—information was that the proposal was on a much more limited basis, but nevertheless of great significance because of the grant of authority it would entail.

The situation stacks up this way:

1. Someone under Secretary Johnson thought the Secretary should have power to "spot promote"—that is, jump junior officers over senior officers if he deemed it advisable—in certain jobs on his staff and in the establishment.

2. The Joint Personnel Policy Board of the three services was asked to make a study to determine what authority for such actions might be found under present law and what new legislation might be needed.

3. The power thus far thought of would be restricted to such positions as the Secretary's staff, the Joint Munitions Board, the Joint Research and Development Policy Board, the Personnel Policy Board and Public Relations.

4. It is not known whether Secretary Johnson personally suggested the study or has been informed of it.

New York, Oct. 26 (NYHT).—The nations of the earth must shape a single world where people may live without want and without war by adapting their individual internal policies to that end, statesmen of American, European and Asiatic countries told the closing session of the New York Herald Tribune Forum tonight.

Failing that, the speakers warned, the earth faces chaos and destruction. They generally emphasized that the United States must take the leading role in shaping the world for peace.

Louis Johnson, United States Secretary of Defense, making the closing address, said:

"We thoroughly understand that yesterday's Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse are now mounted on jets and guided missiles and can ride with such speed and fury as to spread destruction over civilization in a matter of weeks, if not days, or perhaps even htours."

Discussion Heated

The speakers discussed "the interdependence of world problems." At the third session, this afternoon, 16 speakers, representing the Republican and Democratic Parties and various civic groups, got into a heated discussion on the topic, "The Citizen's Responsibility."

Odegard Sums Up

The conclusion was summed up by Dr. Peter H. Odegard, of the University of California, who said every American is "in politics" whether he likes it or not, and about the only bad way he has of discharging his responsibility is to "do nothing about it."

Secretary Johnson emphasized that the present determination of the American people to keep faith with freedom-loving countries, their greater understanding of international relations and their increasing interest in American military and foreign policies augured well for future peace.

America must be strong, not to wage war but to prevent it, the Secretary said, and "therefore, we ourselves must be strong." Our defense team, he explained, is made up of air, sea and ground forces to each of which "honorable roles and missions" are assigned.

"Each gets the part it is best qualified to do in the judgment of the Joint Chiefs of Staff," Johnson continued. "This, of course, does not necessarily mean each is directed to do what he would like best to do. Nor do the plans allow for the luxury of competing and duplicating roles to be paid for out of the pockets of the American taxpayer whose tax burden is already approaching the rock bottom limit."

"World problems are far too wide in their scope to be solved by any one country or even any one select group of countries," Johnson said. "Destiny has made us a world power. And we shall act as a world power—not to foist our will upon anyone, not to take an inch of territory that belongs to any other people—but to rally around us the forces of freedom so as to hold in check any possible outbreak of aggression."

Clay Also Talks

The evening session was also addressed by Gen. Lucius D. Clay, USA (retired), former Military Governor in Germany, who said the United States must lend Germany a hand.

Jawaharlal Nehru, Prime Minister of India, sent a message specially recorded for the forum, and his sister, Mme. V. L. Pandit, Indian Ambassador to the United States, discussed "Free India in World Affairs." Barbara Ward, assistant editor of The Economist, of London, spoke on "Partnership for Survival," and Sforzino Sforza, staff member of the Council of Europe secretariat and son of Count Carlo Sforza explained the accomplishments of his council.

Other speakers, and their subjects, were John Sherman Cooper, member of the United States delegation to the United Nations, "'Faith and Works' in the United Nations;" David Owen, assistant Secretary-General in charge of economic affairs at the U. N., "Towards a Better Life for Underdeveloped Countries," and Dorothy Fosdick, member of the policy planning staff of the Department of State, "The World Is Our Framework."

Navy to Use 7-Ton Guided Missiles Nov. 7

Pearl Harbor, Oct. 26 (AP).—The Navy announced today that two submarines will launch seven-ton guided missiles off Hawaii November 7 to show they can deliver the atomic bomb if war comes.

Pacific Fleet headquarters disclosed that submarines in the current war games in Hawaiian waters already had shown they can carry these huge, long-range weapons in normal undersea operations.

Comdr. John S. McCain, officer in charge of submarine guided missile development, said the demonstration will be "a very significant step in the exploitation of sea power."

"The submarine, with guided missiles, has become a siege bombardment weapon and can be used to deliver atom bombs," he observed. "The whole idea of using submarines to launch guided missiles is a long step toward push-button warfare."

Experimental and training operations have been conducted for more than three years off Point Mugu, near San Diego.

The missiles to be fired are the 30-foot-long loon, an adaptation of the buzz bomb with which the Germans bombarded Great Britain late in the war.

The loon, however, is a missile guided by electronic gear in the submarine. Its range is from 100 to 200 miles.

The loons will be fired from the submarines Cusk and Carbonero. Both are standard fleet type submarines but are equipped with launching platforms.

The missiles will be launched past a column of 70 ships stretched out for 35 miles. The missiles will be anti-aircraft targets for the ships, which took part in the current maneuvers. The ships will be sailing for the return to San Diego.

If the missiles get past the task force, fighter planes from the carriers Boxer and Valley Forge will try to shoot them down.

Plan for Bust Of Forrestal Irks Sculptors

The Department of Defense was the target yesterday of same sculptors for its handling of "Operation Bronze Bust."

The artistic and military world clashed over the method outlined for the selection of a sculptor to do a bronze bust of the late James Forrestal, first Secretary of Defense. More than $26,275 has been raised within the Defense Department to erect a memorial to Forrestal.

Bryant Baker, widely known sculptor of New York City, called the requirement to submit a model unethical "because to submit one made from photographs might take a sculptor two months of his time and overhead." Other sculptors have protested the requirements on the same grounds to members of the memorial committee, it was learned.

U. S. Must Be Ready to Fight Germ War, Warns McAuliffe

Maj. Gen. Anthony C. McAuliffe took over as chief of the Army Chemical Corps yesterday with a warning the United States must be ready to strike back with gas and germ weapons because Russia would not hesitate to use them in event of war.

But at the same time he discounted statements that new developments in germ warfare have made the atomic bomb "obsolete." The A-bomb, he asserted, is still the greatest weapon

McAuliffe, wartime commander of the heroic United States force which defied the Germans at Bastogne, succeeded Maj. Gen. Alden H. Waitt, who was forced into retirement recently after Senate investigators disclosed his links with capital "five percenters."

It was McAuliffe who reportedly replied "nuts" when a vastly superior German force demanded the surrender of the surrounded United States troops at Bastogne.

The new Chemical Corps chief told reporters his technical knowledge of gas and biological warfare is limited, but he is confident he can handle his job satisfactorily.

McAuliffe said he did not think the United States would ever be the first nation to use gas or germs in war, but would look upon them as purely retaliatory weapons to be used only if the enemy used them first. But in that connection, he described the Russians as "ruthless" militarists who would use "anything they could get hold of."

He said the Chemical Corps is "very actively" working on gas and germ warfare research, as well as on radiological defenses against atomic attack.

Guard Faces Early Action in Next War

in their opposition to efforts of the Air Force to "federalize" the Air Guard.

2. A resolution opposing an Air Force plan to concentrate drills in a single monthly eight-hour weekend period.

The meeting, said responsible leaders, also failed to back a proposal by the Georgia delegation for the convention to hear Maj. Gen. George G. Finch present his side of his feud with Maj. Gen. Kenneth F. Cramer, chief of the National Guard Bureau at the Pentagon.

Finch, chief of the Air Force division of the bureau, was fired by Cramer last month in a dispute over who was running air affairs in the bureau. He defied his ouster and has been temporarily reinstated.

Backers of Cramer said that today's action meant the Air Guard officers and the convention are lining up behind the Guard bureau chief in the fight. Many Air Guard officers agreed with this.

However, it appeared likely today that any settlement of the issue will be put off until next week, when a top-level Pentagon conference is scheduled. Representatives of Defense Secretary Louis Johnson here have been urging that the matter be thrashed out then instead of publicly here.

Next week's meeting, it was said, will include Johnson, Secretary of the Army Gordon Gray; Secretary of the Air Force W. Stuart Symington; Maj. Gen. Ellard Walsh, president of the National Guard Association; Maj. Gen. William H. Harrison, jr., president of the Adjutants General Association; Maj. Gen. Leo M. Boyle of Illinois, and probably Cramer and Finch.

General Finch, who has steadfastly refused to discuss his fight with Cramer on the record, today made two statements to this reporter.

Opposes Federalization

"I am opposed to federalization of the Air Guard," he declared, "and the present situation in the Guard Bureau has nothing to do with the federalization issue."

One reason for the "kid gloves" handling of the situation urged by Pentagon chiefs, one official said, is an unwillingness to arouse Georgia's Representatives in Congress — particularly Chairman Carl Vinson of the House Armed Services Committee.

Bradley Gets Resolution

General Bradley was presented an engraved resolution by the association lauding his services to the Nation. He received a standing ovation as General Walsh introduced him as "not only a distinguished soldier but the nicest guy in Washington."

Bradley told newsmen he did not favor federalization of the Guard now. If the Nation were starting out from scratch it might be advisable, he indicated, but it's not "practical to switch over now."

Alabama's Gov. James E. Folsom and Senator Lister Hill also opposed federalization. Folsom predicted the Navy would lose its fight with Pentagon chiefs over unification because it has neglected its naval militia and kept it under strong national control. Consequently, he added, there is little "pride or local interest" in such forces.

Bradley told the guardsmen the European military aid program will have "no serious effect" on supplying the peacetime National Guard. Arms shipments to Europe will not come from either the Guard or its mobilization reserves, he declared.

Better Overseas

Declaring that if we must "fight aggression," it is better to fight it overseas than at home, Bradley told the guardsmen they must get ready.

"If it becomes necessary to project our power overseas," he added, "the first troops to go over will of course be the regular armed forces then on active duty. But those following will have to be obtained in large part from the reserve components."

Now that "we are not the sole possessor of the ability to produce an atomic explosion," said Bradley, our "commitments for international cooperation are greatly increased." This has made the National Guard of greater importance than ever before to national security, he added.

Admirals Were Cordial At Capitol, Bradley Says

Montgomery, Ala., Oct. 26 (Spl.)—Gen. Omar Bradley today denied he and two top Navy admirals had passed each other in a Capitol Hill corridor last week without speaking.

He termed the news stories of such a happening "unfortunate" and explained that reporters had seen only part of his meeting with Admirals Arthur W. Radford and William H. P. Blandy, commanders of the Atlantic and Pacific fleets.

"We met downstairs, spoke and shook hands," he told The Washington Post. "I remember calling Admiral Radford 'Raddy' and everything was cordial. When we got upstairs we didn't stop and speak because we already had done so."

Greece Reducing Army

Athens, Oct. 26 (U.P.) — Premier Alexander Diomedes announced tonight that the Greek armed forces would be reduced by 50,000 men to a total of 210,000.

called by Johnson to consider the "lessons to be learned" from recent House hearings. At these hearings Denfeld backed up claims of his officers that Navy morale had been shaken as a result of unification and Gen. Omar N. Bradley, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, referred to dissenting admirals as "fancy Dans."

What procedure might be used if a top-level decision to replace Denfeld were reached was the subject of some speculation. Authorities were pretty well agreed that only the President could order his removal. Denfeld himself could not resign from a military post to which he had been appointed by the President; he could ask to be retired, but his friends here insist he will do nothing of the kind.

From Capitol Hill, meanwhile, came a suggestion directly to the President that a civilian board be appointed to try its hand at smoothing out the path of unification. Representative Brooks (D., La.), second-ranking member of the House Armed Services Committee, made the proposal in a letter to Mr. Truman.

Brooks said such a board "might be of material benefit in preventing clashes such as have marred the serenity of the Defense Department in the past few months and might promote a more cooperative spirit in the accepting of a reasonable application of new procedure and new organization which naturally attend the progress of such a program as unification."

Hoffman Off, Seeks To Cut Trade Curbs

By Ferdinand Kuhn
Post Reporter

Faced with almost certain trouble from Congress next spring, Economic Cooperation Administrator Paul Hoffman left Washington yesterday for important meetings with European leaders in Paris.

He told reporters he was not pessimistic, but would like to see Marshall Plan countries "go further and faster" in removing trade and currency barriers among themselves. And he took with him this message from President Truman to European leaders: "America's great interest is in a strong, prosperous Europe."

The omens were not good as Hoffman left. Abroad, the dollar gap in Europe was growing worse and France was without a government; at home, Senator Connally (D., Tex.), who piloted the ECA bill through the Senate, predicted the next session would cut "at least" a billion dollars from ECA funds.

Dollar Shortage Growing

The Senator explained that he meant ECA would get a billion less for its third year than the $3,778,000,000 it got for the second year. His prediction thus was less drastic than it seemed, since ECA officials always had planned to make their third year's request about a billion dollars less than the second.

Still, it was a fresh reminder that even congressional friends of ECA are disturbed and disillusioned by the apparent lack of progress in Europe. They see production rising everywhere, but they see also the dollar shortage continuing and growing in spite of the billions the United States has poured in.

The persistence of the dollar gap has shaken the confidence of many leading officials—if they ever had it—that most of western Europe can become self-supporting by 1952, when the Marshall Plan is due to end.

Many in ECA and other agencies now suspect that some change in the original program may be needed, and that some new and imaginative approach is essential if Congress is to vote the necessary funds next year.

There is a growing belief a committee of private citizens could be set up to make a brand-new study of the European recovery problem and recommend solutions. A precedent exists in the famous Harriman committee of 1947, which proposed the framework and the general dimensions of the original Marshall Plan.

Harriman Group Recalled

Nothing definite has been decided, it was said on good authority last night, but ECA has not forgotten the success of the Harriman committee, and may revive the idea when Hoffman gets home.

Senator Connally said yesterday he was glad Hoffman would insist on the need of cutting trade and currency barriers in Europe.

"Hoffman is doing the right thing in talking tough," said Connally. "He should have done it earlier."

But Hoffman denied he would "talk tough" to the Europeans. Leaving the White House after a brief call on President Truman, he told reporters he would wait until he reached Paris before deciding what he would tell the European leaders.

He did say, though, he thought they should "do better" in their efforts at mutual aid and must try to increase their dollar-earning exports to America.

Wants Regional Groupings

What he has in mind, first of all, is creation of regional economic unions in which currencies would be interchangeable and trade barriers nonexistent; and, second, creation of a joint American-European merchandising council to help Britain, and perhaps other Marshall Plan countries, sell more goods in the United States.

Hoffman will try to persuade the European to do these and other things, making it clear to them that the outcome in Congress next year may depend on the new steps they are willing to take.

The tactful tone of Hoffman's comments yesterday was produced, to some extent, by Secretary of State Acheson, who lunched with him Tuesday and learned what he had in mind.

Conscious of Dangers

Acheson always has been conscious of the political dangers of too much tough talk and table-pounding in American dealings with the Europeans. He is especially conscious of it now in view of the preelection atmosphere in Britain, the three-week government crisis in France, the internal dissensions in Belgium and other signs of strain in western Europe.

One informed source said yesterday Acheson had cautioned Hoffman against "tough" tactics in getting the Europeans to move faster toward economic unity. Ambassador Harriman in Paris likewise dislikes anything that might smack of dictation by Americans in dealing with the representatives of proud and independent nations in Europe.

At any rate, Hoffman will try to make the Europeans see the state of American opinion and the need of faster, more determined action, without trying to make them swallow any particular American proposals.

His tactics, as on past occasions, will be to have the specific proposals come from the Europeans themselves.

Tariff League President Urges Reduced Exports

New York, Oct. 26 (AP).—H. Wicklliffe Rose, president of the American Tariff League, tonight urged a "realistic reduction of our exports" to solve the world's trade and dollar crisis.

Orderly increase of imports, without injuring our own productivity, was the first of five "basic approaches to the trade-gap problem" that Rose proposed at the league's sixty-fourth anniversary dinner.

"We believe that imports will be and should be increased," he said, "but we believe also that exports must be decreased, and that a Government policy is misleading, both to our over-capacitated producers at home and to the exporting producers abroad, which assumes that the people of the United States can consume many billions of dollars worth of goods more than they are now consuming."

on defense and 700 million dollars on capital investment and current government expediture, Sir Stafford explained, was spread as widely as possible in order to create "disinflation" rather than "deflation" with its threat of unemployment.

In his attack, Eden said the program is insufficient to check the rising pressure of inflation and fails to "give a spur of real encouragement in production."

Amendments Tabled

The debate is based on a government motion demanding approval of the economy program. All the government's opponents, however, including the Conservatives, Liberals, the two Communists and the small bloc of left-wing Independents, have tabled amendments censuring the government in various terms.

Winston Churchill, leader of the Conservatives, will wind up the debate for the opposition Thursday night. Attlee wil close the debate. A government victory is certain because of its heavy majority.

The general council of the British Trades Union Congress, representing Britain's eight million organized workers, cautiously approved the new economy program today.

The council's approval was lukewarm and failed to dispel the impression union leaders are in dispute among themselves over the government program.

As yet the council and its special economic committee have not reached a final decision on trade union policy toward devaluation.

Feared Blindness

Field Heir, Losing Sight, Dies in Fall

PETER BEATTY
Leaps from the Ritz

London, Oct. 26 (AP)—The wealthy son of a famous British naval hero plunged to his death from a sixth floor window of the Ritz Hotel today after he learned he was going totally blind.

He was the Hon. Peter Beatty, 39, a handsome racing enthusiast who had had eye trouble since birth. He was a son of the late Admiral of the Fleet Earl Beatty, hero of the World War I battle of Jutland, and a grandson of the late Marshall Field, sr., famed Chicago merchant. His mother, Ethel, was Field's only daughter.

The tall, dark aristocrat had spent thousands of dollars for operations both in Britain and the United States. But a specialist told him recently his dim sight would soon be gone entirely.

Normally servants had to help Beatty whenever he walked.

But Beatty was reported to have gone alone on his last walk.

"I am going up to the sixth floor to see a friend," he was quoted as telling his valet in his suite on the second floor of the Ritz.

A few minutes later painters on a nearby building saw his body plummet from a back window into a small areaway two stories below street level.

Danger Noted In European Export Drops

Paris, Oct. 26 (NYHT).—The trend of wages and prices in western Europe so far this year indicates that "relative stability" has been achieved in the internal finances of the Marshall Plan countries, a committee of the Organization for European Economic Cooperation reported today.

It added that declining European exports to the Western Hemisphere, already marked in some fields, might cause balance-of-payment difficulties that "could not fail to disrupt the European economy, reduce production and lead to instability."

The report, submitted by OEEC experts, was completed too soon to include the effects of devaluation. However, the group found in mid-August that conditions were greatly improved over those of 1947 and 1948.

It warned of these inflationary dangers still present in most countries:

(1) An "unbalanced wage situation"; (2) possible "substantial increases" in government spending; (3) the loss, at the end of the Marshall Plan, of import surpluses for which increased production and exports might not be able to compensate immediately, and (4) a continuing decline in exports to the Western Hemisphere.

By countries, the experts found outright inflation existing only in Greece and Turkey, but inflationary pressures present in Britain, France, Netherlands, Norway, Sweden and Iceland. There are evidences of deflation in Belgium and western Germany.

West Germany Seeks Admission to OEEC

Bonn, Germany, Oct. 26 (U.P.)—The West German government has formally applied for authority to seek admission to the Organization for European Economic Cooperation, reliable sources said tonight.

The three-power Western Allied High Commission was asked to make the request, in behalf of the west German state, to the OEEC.

Well informed quarters quoted Konrad Adenauer, chancellor of the western government, as saying the Western Allies would soon be asked formally to end their state of war with Germany.

East German Chief Contradicts Soviet

By Marguerite Higgins

Berlin, Oct. 26 NYHT.—Otto Grotewohl, East German premier, flatly asserted today his government contemplates no separate peace treaty with the Soviet Union and does not expect withdrawal of Russian occupation troops in the near future.

"German unity is the decisive prerequisite for a peace treaty," the chancellor declared at a press conference. "We do not want to see continued division among the Allies. Agreement among the Allies is the best basis for the conclusion of a peace treaty."

These pronouncements directly reversed official Soviet propaganda of the last month and contradicted flat promises given by Ambassador W. S. Semjonov, chief Soviet political adviser, to the Christian Democrats and Liberal Democrats to persuade them to postpone elections in the Soviet zone for one year.

It is notable that Ambassador Semjonov did not become head of the Soviet diplomatic mission to the new East German government and his future role remains a mystery. The arrival from Moscow of Ambassador Pushkin, announced chief of the Soviet mission, has been three times delayed, causing considerable embarrassment to the East Zone regime which had scheduled a diplomatic reception in his honor.

The non-Communist parties themselves are already in deep trouble with the first wave of arrests of their members currently causing an uproar throughout the zone. Targets of this purge, the proportions of which are not yet clear, are the hundreds of Christian Democrats and Liberal Democrats who sent protest telegrams to the leadership protesting the decision to postpone elections in the zone until 1950.

Their agreement to postpone elections made it possible for a Communist-dominated and appointive organization "the Peoples Council" to become the nucleus of the "German Democratic Republic."

Grotewohl's pronouncement today has caused consternation in CDU circles particularly.

Other points made by the Premier at the conference were: (1) That the Soviets would retain jurisdiction over concentration camps in the East Zone; (2) that a general amnesty would give Nazi Party members equal rights with the rest of the citizenry; (3) that measures for the improvement of the standard of living, including higher food rations, would be announced soon, and (4) that the East Zone government would continue attempts to achieve a modus vivendi with the Western Allies in Berlin and to increase trade between East and West Germany.

5 Seamen Missing

3 Ships Sink In Storm Off Europe

London, Oct. 26 (U.P.).—Torrential rains and 80-mile-an-hour winds lashed the coasts of Britain and France for the third straight day today.

At least three ships were wrecked. Numerous towns were flooded. Five seamen were reported missing.

Shipping along the Dutch coast was cut off.

Winds of near-hurricane intensity brought down trees and chimneys in Paris and forced the rerouting of traffic.

In England, floods 5 feet deep cut off road and rail communications at Taunton and Banstead.

Reports from Hamburg, Germany, said 175 ships were sheltered at Cuxhaven. All Gereman signal stations and lighthouses were reported sending out continuous storm warnings.

British Reject Full Self-Rule on Gold Coast, Running Risk of Encouraging Red Link There

London, Oct. 26 (AP).—Britain today turned down demands for full self-government for the four million people of West Africa's Gold Coast. She thereby risked a threatened link-up between European Communist agitators and nationalist leaders in West Africa.

Nigeria, the Gold Coast's neighbor on the east, also is demanding full independence outside the British Commonwealth. A government commission studying the Nigeria question is to make a report about the first of the year.

Arthur Creech Jones, Colonial Secretary, in rejecting the Gold Coast's demands, agreed to give somewhat more freedom to the strategic colony.

He approved a plan to set up a 12-man cabinet and for the indirect election of a Legislature. But he turned down a proposal to make the cabinet responsible to the Legislature, the key point of the Africans' demands. Instead, the cabinet will be answerable to the governor, who is picked by the Colonial Secretary.

The proposals were formulated by an all-Negro, 38-man commission chosen by the Gold Coast government. The group was named after extensive unrest in the colony, which figures prominently in embryo plans to link East and West Africa by a strategic system of air and overland communications.

In February, 1948, the unrest erupted into riots at Accra, the colonial capital. The governor was besieged in his home for several days and troops and armored cars were called out. Several Africans were killed.

The British charged the disturbances were inspired by Communist agents seeking to set up a West African Soviet.

Since then, say informed sources, troops have been ordered to stand by at Gibraltar in event of fresh violence.

The Nigerian demands have been discussed here with Creech Jones by a delegation headed by Dr. Namdi Azikwe and Mallam Sa'ad Zungur. Azikwe, storm center of Nigerian politics, and Zungur are the president and secretary of the National Council of Nigeria and Cameroons.

The delegation now is preparing to leave for an extensive visit to the Communist countries of Eastern Europe.

Azikwe is not a Communist. He owns the largest chain of newspapers in Nigeria. But both his associates and Colonial Office experts say he is ready to make a deal with European Communists if he could win their support for his independence movement.

McCloy Views On Germany Annoy British

London, Oct. 26 (AP)—Britain was reported annoyed today at United States High Commissioner John J. McCloy for statements to newsmen on dismantling and other German industrial affairs.

Diplomatic officials said the British have protested that western policies are harmed by interviews on October 9 and October 17 in which he was described as calling for:

1. An end to "purposeless dismantling" of industrial plants in the British-controlled Ruhr.
2. New arrangements for insuring the peaceful development of German industry, which would incorporate the present six-power Ruhr authority.

Officials in Washington pictured the whole thing as a tempest in a teapot. They said the British objections were registered informally with the American Embassy in London and no written protest was involved.

In Frankfurt a United States High Commission source said it had not been informed officially of the British protest. McCloy, on a tour of western Germany, could not be reached.

The United States is on record as standing by the United States-British-French agreement of last April which calls for continued dismantling of war potential plants despite protests from the West German political leaders.

The dismantling issue has long been a source of anti-British feeling in West Germany. Most of the factories being torn up are in the British zone. The British have responsibility for carrying out what is actually a three-power affair.

U. S. Protests To Czechs on Arrested Aide

Prague, Oct. 26 (AP).—The United States has protested to the Czech Foreign Ministry that American officials have been unable to see a United States Embassy official arrested five days ago as a spy.

The employe is Samuel Meryn, 39

Permission to see him was given and canceled later. The Czechs said cancellation was due to what they called inaccurate statements on the case broadcast by the Voice of America.

The government tonight told the Roman Catholic priests they must obey their government rather than their bishops.

By Gaston Coblentz

Belgrade, Oct. 26 (NYHT).—The Kremlin is enforcing "unconditional subjection" upon its satellites in central and eastern Europe, Premier Marshal Tito told a group of Italian pro-Communist Partisans of World War II in Belgrade last night.

He said Russia's domination of "small socialist countries" was not only political but economic. He declared economic subjugation by the Soviet Union is "exploitation."

The marshal said he will fight on "enduringly" against Soviet misuse of Marx and Lenin but added the Kremlin's wrongs abroad will not cause the fall of communism within Russian borders. "Socialism in the Soviet Union will not fail because of this," he said. "It is a reality in the Soviet Union."

Marshal Tito made a bid for "the closest economic ties" with Italy, a member of the western bloc.

Russia's demand for the recall of Marshal Tito's Ambassador in Moscow, announced by Radio Moscow at 3 a. m. today, was regarded in Belgrade as a possible opening gambit in a new round of developments in the Soviet-Yugoslav struggle.

It is unlikely the Yugoslavs will let the Soviet move go unanswered.

Actually, Yugoslavia will not be obliged to "recall" Karlo Mrazovic, the Ambassador to Moscow. He returned to Belgrade in May.

Russia has not had an Ambassador in Belgrade since last summer when Anatolij Lavrentiev returned to Moscow to become a Soviet deputy foreign minister.

Yugoslavia has approved Assistant Secretary of State George V. Allen as new United States Ambassador, it was revealed today.

Allen's appointment has not yet been officially announced by Washington.

U. N. Guard Proposal Opposed By Russia

Lake Success, Oct. 26 (AP).—The Soviet Union blasted a proposal for a United Nations field service today as a "subtle American scheme to turn the United Nations into an obedient weapon of its own selfish policy."

Russian Delegate Semyon K. Tsarapkin charged in the 59-nation special political committee that the U. N. guard would be made up overwhelmingly of Americans and would be then used by the United States to sneak military personnel into foreign countries.

The United States and three other nations proposed today that the United Nations impose an arms embargo on Albania and Bulgaria until they stop aiding Greek guerillas.

The resolution will be taken up by the political committee.

Amtorg Plans Alien Agency Registration

New York, Oct. 26 (U.P.).—The Amtorg Trading Corp. disclosed today it would register as a foreign agency.

Assistant United States Attorney Edward E. Rigney termed the announcement "interesting, but rather belated."

Isidore G. Needleman, attorney for Amtorg, announced he had written the Attorney General's office in Washington, advising that Amtorg had decided to register under the Foreign Agency Act and "will do so within a few days."

[Department of Justice officials said in Washington that "legally, the indictment against Amtorg and its top six officials is not affected," but declined comment on possibility prosecution might be dropped if registrations are received. It was learned unofficially that registration forms already have been obtained by Amtorg.]

The agency and its six Russian officials were indicted by a Federal grand jury in Washington Friday for failing to register as agents of a foreign country. Five were arrested here Friday and jailed until they posted $15,000 bail each on Monday. The sixth is reported in Russia.

The Amtorg announcement was made today in Federal Court.

United States Commissioner Edward MacDonald ordered the defense to file notice of appearance by Monday morning and set the hearing on their removal to Washington for trial for Wednesday.

William Friedman, a defense attorney, said "At least three of these defendants came to America to negotiate on Lend-Lease and have diplomatic passports." He did not identify the three.

"That doesn't matter," Rigney retorted. "None of these defendants possess any diplomatic immunity. None has been recognized as a diplomatic personage."

MacDonald said the Government should have been notified of any diplomatic connections among the defendants and that it was not.

The five defendants are A. V. Zakharov, president and chairman; V. P. Rebrov, vice president; S. A. Shevchenko, treasurer; A. A. Istchenko, secretary and G. N. Ogloblin, assistant treasurer. The sixth man indicted was Dimitri Bagrov.

Burma to Vote in March

Rangoon, Burma, Oct. 26 (AP).—General elections, long deferred by a still-unsettled civil war, are to be in March, 1950, under government plans announced today. Preparation of fresh electoral rolls in government-controlled areas will start this week.

Treason Trial Here Is Told Of 'Boasts' Burgman Made

The Herbert J. Burgman treason trial jury yesterday heard five more wartime propaganda broadcasts of station DEBUNK and the Government placed its last witness on the stand.

A former clerk in the office of the military attache in the American Embassy in Berlin, Burgman is charged with making a series of treasonous broadcasts for the Germans under the alias of "Joe Scanlon." He is a native of Hokah, Minn.

Henry E. Fritsche, wartime chief of the Berlin short wave radio station, yesterday identified Burgman as Joe Scanlon and said he had boasted his broadcasts "weakened the war will of America" and "were more important than any other Berlin broadcasts."

Jury Hears Records

Fritsche, the last scheuled Government witness, said he had "supervisory authority over Burgman." He added that Burgman resented any interference because "his broadcasts were not suposed to be censored."

The District Court session was marked by repeated intercessions by Judge Alexander Holtzoff. Time and again he told special assistant to the Attorney General Victor Woerheide what questions to ask Fritsche and instructed Fritsche on his replies.

At one point Judge Holtzoff asked the prosecution to minimize use of the "Star Spangled Banner," which was played at least once during each DEBUNK broadcast.

The judge said he thought repetition of the National Anthem was "improper use."

The records played to the jury of seven men and five women yesterday, made in Berlin in May, June and August, 1942, followed the pattern of those played previously.

"Joe Scanlon," billed as "American's public debunker No. 1," charged it was "absurd for American farmers who lost their farms because Jewish banks foreclosed the mortgage on them after the First World War to fight a war for the purpose of reinstalling the Jews in their former positions in Germany.

Referring to President Roosevelt, "Scanlon" broadcast, "It is something so terrible, so inhuman, that any man should have been willing to send millions of boys in the prime of their youth to death merely to hold on to his job."

Reads "Private's" Letter

Speaking in a slow, occasionally cracking high-pitched voice, "Scanlon" read what purported to be a letter from Pvt. William Delay to his mother in Houston, Tex. "Scanlon" quoted the son as saying 21 of his company had deserted, that seven ships in the convoy which took him to England had been sunk, and that enlisted men were forced into cramped quarters while officers "took the nice cabins on the upper deck.

Chief Prosecutor William Paisley said the Government expects to complete its case today.

Defense Counsel James L. Laugglin said he expected the first witness for Burgman would be his wife.

Opera Star Called a Spy

like Marshal Hermann Goering of Germany, changes uniforms several times a day, wears ornate diamond rings, paints up his face with makeup, wallows in wealth and engages in "wild orgies."

(A spokesman for the Yugoslav Embassy in the United States called the charges "utterly ridiculous and malicious and false in every particular."

(Zinka's representative in New York, Jack Adams, said the idea she is a spy is ridiculous. "She's only interested in her music and her clothes," he said.)

The 43-year-old singer is married to Maj. Gen. L. Ilich, former member of the Yugoslav Embassy in Washington.

Zinka has sung occasionally in Belgrade and Tito has been reported as an admirer of her voice.

She is hopeful of leaving soon for the United States to go on a three-month concert tour. The itinerary has been arranged, but thus far she has received no entry permit from the United States.

Born in Yugoslavia, she won wide acclaim as Zinka Kunc Milanov during the war for her performance with the Metropolitan in such operas as "Aida" and "Tosca." She later divorced Predrog Milanov, a Zagreb actor.

In the summer of 1946 Mme. Milanov made a concert tour of South America. In Rio de Janeiro she met and fell in love with General Ilich, who then was Yugoslav Ambassador-at-large to South America.

They were married in April, 1947, at the Yugoslav Embassy in Washington.

Tito is 57. His first wife died years ago. His second wife is a younger woman, who was active in medical and propaganda work for the Partisans in the war. She remains in the background. He is the sole dispenser of hospitality at official parties.

Chinese Reds Massing for Kwangsi Push

Chungking, Oct. 26 (AP).—Possibly 225,000 seasoned Chinese Communist troops were reported massing today for a breakthrough into Kwangsi Province, keystone of Nationalist resistance on the mainland.

Against this force Gen. Pai Chung-hsi, the Nationalist commander, has 200,000 troops.

Official reports say Gen. Lin Piao has assembled seven Red armies of possibly 175,000 men for the attack on Kwangsi from the north.

Two Red armies of Gen. Chen Keng, who occupied Canton, are reported moving westward for an attack on Kwangsi from the east.

The preliminary skirmishings have begun. Nationalist dispatches insist the Reds so far have been held off.

Red Threat to Asia Will Be Studied

Hongkong, Oct. 26 (U.P.).—Field Marshal Sir William Slim, chief of the British imperial general staff, is due here Thursday to discuss conditions in Communist-threatened Asia, it was announced today.

Slim and David Rees-Williams, parliamentary undersecretary for the colonial office will discuss the situation with Ambassador Sir Ralph Stevenson and local authorities.

The talks here will lay groundwork for a formal conference of Commonwealth envoys in Malaya next month.

Across the Pearl River estuary from Hongkong, authorities of the Portuguese colony of Macao ordered 6000 troops to the border as Communist advance units were reported nearing the line.

The border alert was a precautionary measure. The Reds were expected to occupy Chinese territory adjoining Macao peaceably, as they did on the borders of Hongkong.

sible to reject a plan for the international control of atomic energy on the purely negative ground that it would infringe national sovereignty. The ideal of international cooperation and indeed the whole concept on which the United Nations was based would be meaningless if states insisted on the rigid maintenance of all their sovereign rights."

They concluded, "It is apparent that there is a fundamental difference not only on methods but also on aims. All the sponsoring powers other than the USSR put world security first and are prepared to accept innovations in traditional concepts of international cooperation, national sovereignty, and economic organization where these are necessary for security.

Sovereignty First

"The government of the USSR puts its sovereignty first and is unwilling to accept measures which may impinge upon or interfere with its rigid exercise of unimpeded state sovereignty."

In New York, it was indicated that the Russian delegate to the atomic discussions, Jacob Malik, would have no comment on the report.

The document also revealed, as an incidental, that during the discussions other representatives raised with Malik the news that Russia had set off an atomic explosion, and asked him whether he thereby had any new experience to support his contentions on the efficacy of periodic control. Malik responded by talking about something else and never mentioned the actual existence of a bomb in Russia.

Acheson Charges Chinese Deny Exit Visas to 4 Americans

Secretary of State Acheson complained yesterday that Chinese Communist authorities were denying exit visas to Gen. Robert E. Soule, the American military attache in Nanking, and to three members of the American consulate staff in Communist-controlled Shanghai.

Soule applied for his exit visa on October 6, but has still not received it, Acheson told a news conference. Chinese employes of the American Embassy have demanded that Soule stay in Nanking until settlement of what the Secretary called "their demands for exorbitant severance pay."

"The department takes a serious view of the flimsy pretext used by the local authorities to prevent departure of an American official from China in contravention of generally recognized principles of international law," Acheson declared.

"The United States Government does not countenance negotiations under duress and will not authorize its representatives in China to submit to such pressures."

Steps Taken in China

Acheson said American representatives in China were taking steps to get "immediate" issuance of Soule's visa. As for the three consular officers in Shanghai, the consul general there has filed a written protest with Communist officials asking for action at once.

The Secretary said he had not yet finally decided whether to send Ambassador Philip C. Jessup on his long-planned survey mission to the Far East. The answer would depend, he said, on the length of time Jessup would be needed in New York at the United Nations Assembly.

Dealing with other subjects, Acheson said:

1. Indian officials have mentioned informally their desire to have a stockpile of wheat in India, partly to bring Indian wheat out of hoarding. The State Department is examining the possibilities, which might include a barter for strategic materials.

2. Organizing of the military and program is proceeding fast and effectively under its new director, James Bruce, former Ambassador to Argentina.

3. It has always been American policy to bring the Bonn government of western Germany into the specialized agencies of the United Nations; the United States has no immediate plans for reviewing the German occupation statute.

Czechs Denounced

No Acheson press conference is complete nowadays without at least one statement, in caustic language, denouncing one or another of the Communist governments of eastern Europe. Yesterday the target of the Secretary's indignation was Czechoslovakia, because of the spy charges against three American Embassy employes.

Describing the charges as "obviously trumped up," the Secretary said the United States knew enough about "police methods" in Prague "to know how much credence should be placed in 'confessions' and 'irrefutable proof' in politically inspired propaganda cases of this kind."

Still, Acheson said, the United States had agreed to the Czech "request" to withdraw John G. Hayn, assistant attache in the Embassy's political department, and Isaac Patch, the political attache. A third accused employe, Samuel Mervyn, has been held incommunicado since Friday, and Embassy officials are still trying to see him.

Union Local Sues To Retain Identity

An AFL building laborers local yesterday asked the District Court to save it from being absorbed by a a larger, left-wing local of the International Hodcarriers Union.

Local 764 won a temporary injunction restraining the international union and the District Laborers Council from carrying out an international executive board order giving Local 74 jurisdiction over building laborers employed in the construction of apartment houses more than four stories high.

Local 764, represented by Attorney Martin F. O'Donoghue and William J. Walsh, charged in its suit that Local 74 was "Communist dominated," and that loss of the disputed jurisdiction would mean a loss of 300 members, and therefore practical extinction of Local 764.

The injunction suit brings into the open a long-smouldering fight for power between right-wing and left-wing factions in the District Laborers Council, made up of seven locals. Left-wing Local 74, with some 3000 members who work chiefly in commercial construction, is numerically and financially as strong as the other six locals together.

It was Local 74 which forced the District Laborers Council to approve the six-weeks' strike of the building laborers last summer. The other locals did not join the strike, and there was an outburst of ill-feeling between the right and left, particularly between Locals 74 and 764.

In September, Local 764 charged the bigger Local 74 was "raiding" its jurisdiction in the house-construction field. The dispute was laid before the international executive committee, which ruled against Local 764 and in favor of Local 74 on October 17.

Local 764 told the District Court yesterday it wants to appeal the executive committee's decision before the next international convention, which the local says is not scheduled until 1951. The right-wing local asserted, however, that unless the court granted an injunction, Local 764 would be completely eliminated before the convention rolled around.

Fight Looms

3 Left-Wing CIO Unions Face Breakup

Cleveland, Oct. 26 (AP)—A right-wing plan for carving up at least three major CIO unions under so-called left-wing control was disclosed tonight in advance of a convention showdown.

The convention begins here next Monday. The top leaders of the conservative right-wing faction developed the reported strategy at secret meetings in hotel rooms yesterday and today.

The rightists — representing the anti-Communist elements in the CIO—were reported to have agreed with CIO President Philip Murray on this general plan for disposing of their politically leftist enemies:

1. The United Electrical Workers, Farm Equipment Workers and Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers would be tossed out of the CIO forthwith.

2. A new charter "probably" would be established in the electrical field so that the right-wing faction, headed by CIO Secretary-treasurer James B. Carey, can start all over again to organize electrical, radio and television workers.

3. Murray's own steelworkers' union would absorb the mine, mill and smelter workers—an organization for almost all the Nation's miners outside the coal fields.

4. A special organization committee would be set up for the public workers, white collar and other jurisdictive fields now controlled by the CIO's 11 or 12 so-called left-wing unions.

5. The approximately 50,000 members of the farm equipment workers directed by the CIO executive board to merge with Walter Reuther's auto workers after last year's convention, would be turned over in a bloc to Reuther. FE President Grant Oakes had tried to take his union under the wing of the leftist-dominated UE, the CIO's third largest union with about 500,000 members.

Earlier today President Murray refused to be dragged into a public battle with the UE, after that union announced it was creating a committee to talk with him about various policy differences.

Murray Asks Truman To Oust Robert Denham

Cleveland, Oct. 26 (AP)—CIO President Philip Murray today asked President Truman to fire Robert N. Denham, general counsel of the National Labor Relations Board.

Murray accused Denham of favoring employers and chasing down "frivolous and unfounded charges" by plant owners.

In Washington Denham said he had no comment in reply.

cation of the panel's recommendations. The board was set up by the President in an effort to avert the strike. The panel asked that the CIO Steelworkers withdraw their wage demands, and that the steel companies provide and exclusively finance a welfare program costing 10 cents an hour for each worker. The union accepted the findings; the companies are willing to grant the 10-cents-an-hour program, but insist that the employes also contribute to the welfare program.

William H. Colvin, jr., president of Crucible Steel, wired Conciliator Ching: "Find out from the steel board itself what it actually meant by good faith, individual collective bargaining. Only the steel board can make this clear. Then bargain on this basis." Similar requests were wired by other small steel corporations.

In Louisville, Ky., Assistant Secretary of Labor Ralph Wright charged that the steel strike was "politically inspired" by the industry to prove a need for the Taft-Hartley law, which organized labor and President Truman oppose. Wright is a former AFL International Typographical Union official.

There was nothing to break the gloom in the coal strike. Some 400,000 soft coal miners have been out since September 19 to get shorter hours, increased pay, and an increased employer contribution to the United Mine Workers welfare fund.

The union continued listless contract discussions with the Southern producers yesterday, then recessed the talks until next week. Contract discussions with other operators have been broken off altogether. Violence was reported at Altoona, Pa., where a steam shovel was blown up at a strip mine.

Flaming Meteor Seen In Skies Over Capital

Several persons last night reported seeing a flaming blue-green meteor break up about 10 p. m. in the northwestern skies over Washington.

Neither the Weather Bureau nor the Naval Observatory had any information. One observer reported the meteor looked like a fiery mass of molten metal with a swirling orange tail.

Man Who Attacked Reuthers May Be On Prowl Again

Detroit, Oct. 26 (AP)—Possibility that the gunman who ambushed the Reuther brothers again was on the prowl was under police investigation tonight.

A stranger, seen peering into the windows at the home of Kenneth Bannon, national Ford director for the CIO-United Auto Workers, was being sought.

Bannon had been reported "next on the list" of the assassin who shot and seriously wounded UAW-CIO President Walter Reuther and his brother, Victor, national UAW-CIO educational director.

Polio Group Studies Free Insurance Plan

By N. S. Haseltine
Post Reporter

The National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis is considering issuing free polio insurance to contributors, it was learned yesterday.

No definite decision, however, has been reached in the matter since it was first broached to the foundation's policy-making body last summer with the advent of bargain rate commercial polio insurance.

The foundation already guarantees that no polio victim will go without medical care for lack of finances, and pays those costs over and above what the victim or his family con afford.

Last year more than 17 million dollars in March of Dimes funds was spent on patient care alone.

The foundation, too, has never taken a public stand on the value of commercial polio insurance. Persons asking advice on whether or not they should buy such insurance are told that the decision is for the individual and. just as in life insurance policies, should be made by the individual.

Initial proposals that the foundation issue free policies either to all contributors or to those giving more than a stated sum, say $5, were taken up at the summer meeting of the organization's board of trustees, but never publicized.

They were temporarily tabled, a spokesman for the foundation revealed yesterday, largely because of "the complications of running an insurance business in 48 States."

Other delaying factors, it was stated, were requirements of setting up separate office and a separate staff to handle the huge volume of work any policy-issuing plan would entail.

Special studies are under way on these extra administrative needs, the legal aspects involved, and actuarial statistics to determine as far as possible just how much extra the insurance would cost the foundation in patient care and whether the extra incentive to contribute would make up the difference, the spokesman said.

It still is not known how much, if any, the commercial insurance policies will hurt the foundation in its next drive for funds. Those who argue that the new policies will cut into contributions point out that the policyholders will not donate.

On the other side, the argument is advanced that the public contributes to the annual fund-raising campaign to provide funds to fight infantile paralysis, not to insure against its costs if it does strike.

Mental Ills Of Soldiers Now on Rise

Mexico City, Oct. 26 (AP).—Today's GI Joe is a much bigger problem to the Army psychologist than was the doughboy of 1914-18.

While his wartime mental problems are growing, the folks back home are learning to take war in their stride.

These were conclusions in a report on "War Psychoses" prepared for the twelfth International Congress on Military Medicine and Pharmacy. Dr. J. Paraire, of Paris, wrote it.

Dr. Paraire says not only are the mental difficulties of the modern soldier more complex, but there are more of them. He says there were three times as many soldier in World War II as in World War I, and 10 times as many were in hospitals with nervous complaints.

He adds: "The second world war shows the curious result of an increase of mental disorders among armies and a decrease among the civil population."

Comparing the two wars, the difference in the type of nervous troubles is striking. The French specialist asserts that hysteria and amnesia, forgetting who one is, has just about disappeared.

The modern soldier's troubles tend more to show themselves in physical forms—heart, lung and urinary upsets and disorders in the sexual organs.

Polio Case Total Passes 37,000 in U. S. for Year

New cases of infantile paralysis in the United States so far this year have passed the 37,000 mark and may reach 50,000 by the year's end, it was reported yesterday.

Officially, statisticians of Public Health Service have recorded 37,087 new cases in 1949 up to and including last Saturday. During last week, 1148 new cases were added, the ninth consecutive weekly decline since the polio peak about August 20.

The Nation's total corresponds to 22,588 cases reported during the same period last year, and 1078 cases for the corresponding week in 1948.

Included in the national toll were three new cases reported within the District of Columbia; 13 in Virginia, and 14 in Maryland. Last year during the same week, five cases were reported in the District, 18 in Virginia and seven in Maryland.

Senator Predicts Big 'Dog Fight' in Congress

Senator Ecton (R., Mont.), predicted yesterday that the next session of Congress "will be the biggest dogfight you have ever seen."

The battle will shape up over taxes, deficit spending, "socialized medicine" and "extension of social security to include everybody," he told a reporter.

Virginia ABC Cuts Liquor Traffic From District

Richmond, Va., Oct. 26 (AP).—State ABC Board investigators reported today a "material decrease" in whisky and beer traffic from Washington into northern Virginia areas.

Clyde W. Saunders, jr., enforcement division director, in a report to the ABC Board said the decrease was attributable to publicity and to actual arrests of persons on charges of violating the ABC Act.

In recent weeks agents in the Alexandria area, assisted by personnel from the board's offices here, have kept a vigilant watch on traffic into Alexandria and Arlington from Washington.

The checkup followed complaints of beer distributors in the section that their business was being hurt by illegal transportation of the beverage across the Potomac.

Church Group Lauds Work Of Probe Unit

The House Committee on Un-American Activities yesterday was praised for its "splendid and thorough work" by the American Council of Christian Churches.

The council adopted a resolution declaring "no other single committee of national Government has done so much for the preservation of the American way of life and our God-given institutions." The action was taken at its opening session at Grace Baptist Church, 9th st. and South Carolina ave. se.

It urged continuance of the committee and called on all "God-fearing citizens" to give it their support. The council represents 16 denominations with a membership of 1,500,000.

'A Regimented State'

At an afternoon meeting, the Rev. William E. Ashbrook, pastor of Calvary Bible Church, Columbus, Ohio, said that because "a free church has a tremendous stake in a free government," the council feels called on to "speak against such legislation as would rob our citizens of their constitutional rights and would ultimately subject the churches to the control of a regimented state."

He scored as "socialistic and communistic" proposed legislation for fair employment practices, Federal aid to education and socialized medicine.

"Socialized medicine," he said, "would make the very bodies of men to be citadels for the exploitation of Washington politicians."

"Reformation" Called a Need

Dr. William Harllee Bordeaux, general secretary of the council, declared that "a reformation is more needed in this 20th century than it was in the 16th when Luther and Calvin led the forces of righteousness."

"Unbelieving Protestant leadership seeks totalitarian control in this and all lands," he declared, attacking particularly the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, which claims a membership of 29 million in 27 denominations.

"Let us oppose in Christ's name the 'One Worlders' who would scrap our Nation's Bill of Rights and make us the helpless pawns of nations with small passion for freedom," Dr. Bordeaux declared.

Sessions will continue through today and Friday.

Neighborhood Consciousness Is Advocated

The Rev. Dr. Frederick E. Reissig, executive secretary of the Washington Federation of Churches, yesterday urged the city's churches to become "neighborhood conscious."

Dr. Reissig spoke at the missionary institute at First Congregational Church, 10th and G sts. nw., sponsored by the Washington Council of Church Women. Sessions will begin again at 10:30 a. m. today and continue through 1 p. m.

Speaking in a panel discussion on the work of the churches in Washington, Dr. Reissig pointed out that all the city's social problems are in the neighborhood of some church, yet few churches feel any responsibility for their neighborhoods.

The Rev. Leonard S. Edmonds of the Washington Federation of Churches told the women attending the institute that "the churches represent a greater potential for service to the community than any other single institution in society."

Arthur G. Kruse, director of the United Community Services, pictured as "Christian frontiers," the city's social needs in the fields of preservation of physical existence, social health, protection of children and youth, and prevention and treatment of physical and mental illness.

At the afternoon session, Miss Ruth Isabelle Seabury, who recently returned from Japan, said that just as the church of Japan needs the church of America, so the Christian church of America needs what the Japanese Christian people can give us "out of sorrow too deep for words."

1600 Home Units Reported Needed At Fort Belvoir

By The Associated Press

A need for immediate construction of about 1600 housing units at Fort Belvoir was laid before a meeting of Washington area builders yesterday.

Maj. Gen. Douglas L. Weart, commanding the Engineers' Center, told the builders there is an "immediate and continuing need" for the housing for military personnel.

He called the meeting to obtain proposals for building 350 privately financed rental units on the reservation under the Housing Act of 1949.

The Army has authorized Fort Belvoir to lease about 30 acres of Government land on the Mount Vernon Highway about a half mile south of Route 1.

Facing The Music

"Music has charms to soothe a savage breast, to soften rocks, or bend a knotted oak," William Congreve wrote back in 1697. It is quite apparent that Congreve penned these lines without ever being subjected to the benefits of transit radio as bestowed by the Capital Transit Co. Far from feeling any soothing sensation, not a few patrons have been infuriated to the point that they are willing to try a little savagery on Capital Transit. We suspect that a good many streetcar and bus operators feel the same way.

Perhaps the worst criticism to be made is that the installation was made before the public had a chance adequately to express itself. That situation will be remedied in a hearing before the Public Utilities Commission at 10 this morning in Room 500 of the District Building. The PUC has an unenviable job, but the hearing is long overdue. Whether the objectors represent a substantial proportion of Capital Transit patrons or merely a disgruntled but vocal minority, as the company contends, an important principle is at stake.

That principle is the right of privacy, a right that is invaded all too often these days. It is hardly a justification to say that because some persons like transit radio or do not strenuously object to it, all patrons should bear the cross. Anyone who prefers his syrup on pancakes rather than in commercials is left defenseless. Elsewhere he can turn off his radio, skip the portions of his newspaper he doesn't like, or even refuse to eat in a restaurant which features objectionable music. But in a streetcar either he listens to the organized din, or walks. The fact that the hotter jive numbers have not been included in programs is only a mitigating circumstance, for the rider is still being commercialized without his consent. As it is now, the transit patron is in the position of the householder who, having banished the brush salesman from the front door, finds that he has sneaked in through the basement window.

Leopold's Return

Since the war the Belgians have been subject to intermittent agitation about the wisdom or otherwise of recalling Leopold III to his throne. The subject is before Parliament and people again in a proposal sponsored by the Social Christian (Catholic) majority for a plebiscite. The King has stated that unless 55 percent of the valid votes favor his return, he will abdicate. It is important that the question be settled definitively. But one doubts whether there would be any settlement, in the sense of a tranquillization of public opinion, on the basis of a majority vote in the neighborhood of 55 percent. Feeling against the King runs high in the areas of the country where the Germans were engaged; it follows that the national division might be deepened rather than healed by a not overwhelmingly successful referendum.

The good name of the King in the matter of the capitulation to the Germans has lately been rehabilitated abroad. There was never any question as to this in Belgium itself. The Belgians knew the facts, and merely awaited with philosophical confidence the verdict of history; they likewise knew and appreciated the personal bravery and gallant leadership that Leopold displayed in a hopeless situation. What rankled with many Belgians was Leopold's subsequent behavior. To millions of Belgians the defeat was the end of a battle, not the end of a war, and they developed an underground army which constantly harassed the German army of occupation. Many escaped prisoners of war can attest both the personal bravery of men and women and children in Belgium in those dark days and the ramified organization that made that bravery count in collective resistance.

What, they ask, was Leopold doing in the meantime? The answer was that he was living in his castle, getting married again, and giving no evidence that he had the slightest sympathy with the underground or the Belgian effort to shake off the invader's yoke. Possibly he could do nothing to show fellow-feeling. But the evidence seems strong that the brooding Leopold had no faith in the victory of the Allied cause and had become resigned to defeat. Be all this as it may, however, only at the peril of the system can a constitutional monarch become embedded in politics. This the British recognized as by instinct in the case of Edward VIII—some of whose traits are to be found in Leopold—and it is surprising to note in the debate that this instinct is so little represented, and that arguments are exchanged merely on either a sentimental or an intellectual plane. So the debate simply drags on, and the life of Prince Regent Charles, Leopold's younger brother, is unenviable. If he stays too much in the background, he might be accused of neglecting his duties; if he does those duties too conscientiously, he might bring on his head the suspicion that he is courting his brother's mantle.

Wheat For Manganese

The first major fruit of the proposal to swap American surpluses for foreign strategic materials may be seen in the discussions with India involving the barter of wheat for manganese. The two countries reportedly have agreed to try to work out an exchange of some 1 million tons of American wheat for 80 million dollars worth of Indian strategic materials, particularly manganese and mica. This would be a highly salutary application of the authority contained in the extension of the Commodity Credit Corporation charter—authority for the CCC to trade surplus agricultural commodities for items produced abroad which are on the list of strategic and critical materials needed for stockpiling.

The potentialities of this section are considerable, the principal limitation being the ability of the Munitions Board to reimburse the CCC for materials so acquired. This point will require administrative coordination. The CCC could dispose of some strategic materials to industry for current use; but it would hardly be sensible for the CCC to acquire duplicate stockpiles because the Munitions Board did not have funds to buy them. With respect to India, there should be no great problem; for manganese is in great demand for our stockpiles, and it is in the national interest, furthermore, to develop sources of supply other than Russia. Indeed, since India's current production is already committed, the arrangement might well take the form of a non-interest-bearing commodity loan, with the United States supplying the wheat which is immediately available and which India needs in return for manganese to be delivered several years hence.

One praiseworthy feature of the otherwise largely demagogic farm bill just passed by Congress is a provision whch may augment this kind of barter. The CCC is authorized to make available to the Munitions Board food commodities in danger of spoilage or deterioration. No specific reimbursement terms are defined; in other words, the CCC may take a loss if it deems such a loss to be in the public interest. This opens an additional, if limited, channel to the Munitions Board to extend the utility of its funds by purchasing such commodities as dried eggs and milk at less than the market price and then exchanging them for strategic materials.

The advantages of this program are twofold: it enables the United States to dispose of troublesome surpluses in return for needed materials, and it enables dollar-short countries such as India to obtain food without causing an additional drain on Britain's dollar pool. The need is to orient strategic buying so as to make maximum use of these possibilities. Barter of this sort is no substitute for multilateral world trade under more normal conditions, but in these days of an imbalance fraught with danger to peace and security it is a temporary aid that ought to be exploited to the utmost.

Minority Report

The minority report issued by six Republican members of the Joint Committee on Atomic Energy seems to say that they don't like the Atomic Energy Commission even though they can't find anything wrong with it. It is a ludicrous document when viewed in the light of the sweeping charges made by Senator Hickenlooper that launched the committee's investigation of the AEC. It is a vindictive and narrowly partisan document when viewed in the light of the tremendous and vital task faced by the AEC.

The minority report charges that the AEC approach to its task has been "leisurely" and "characterized by indecision"; that security has been "loosely administered in violation of the law." Nothing specific is given in support of the first charge. As for the second, it is alleged only that emergency employes were cleared for access to restricted data without prior FBI investigations, that radioactive isotopes were shipped abroad, that known Communists (actually a single case) were granted atomic energy fellowships, that the AEC favors exchanging atomic information with Canada and Britain.

These allegations contradict themselves. Emergency employes were cleared without prior FBI investigation precisely because the commission felt it could not afford a leisurely approach to its task; it had to take a calculated risk and took it, indeed, with an excessive caution that seriously retarded its program. The shipment of isotopes abroad was certified by the most competent scientific advisers to be without any military significance. The exchange of atomic information with Canada and Britain is a matter to be determined at the very highest level, by the President with the concurrence of Congress, not by the AEC itself.

Ten days before Senator Hickenlooper charged the AEC with "incredible mismanagement," he made the following statement:

> I might say—just to clarify this situation—that I think the record of loyalty and character in this whole project from the Manhattan District down to the present time through the present commission has been of an unusually high order. I think the percentage of undesirable people who have occasion to have access to restricted data is remarkably low and indicates a standard that probably could not be excelled and, perhaps, not even equaled among any other group or class of people, so I do not take the attitude that everybody is bad.

Why Senator Hickenlooper changed his attitude and why his Republican colleagues tried to bail him out of his blunder is not explained at all in the sloppy, unsubstantiated generalizations of this minority report. Political partisanship seems the only explanation.

Visa Curtain

The gates of the Great Wall surrounding the United States have been slammed in the face of Glen Shortliffe, a Canadian professor of Romance languages at Queen's University, Kingston, Ontario. He was appointed last spring to the faculty of Washington University at St. Louis. On June 20, he was granted a visa by the American consul at Toronto. On June 24, however, an exclusion order was issued against him by the Immigration and Naturalization Service without any explanation beyond the bare assertion that he is "a person whose entry is deemed prejudicial to the public interests of the United States."

The exclusion, according to officials of the service, was merely "temporary" pending an investigation. But the investigation has yet to be completed; Professor Shortliffe is still barred from the United States; Washington University has had to begin its academic year without his services. "The inability of the university to secure the services of Prof. Glen Shortliffe of Queen's University is extremely unfortunate," said Chancellor Arthur Compton. "In the judgment of his colleagues in the field of Romance languages, Professor Shortliffe is an excellent teacher, a promising scholar, and a man of the finest qualifications of citizenship and character."

Professor Shortliffe believes, and with apparent justification, that he was excluded because of his political opinions—because he belongs to the Cooperative Commonwealth Federation, a minor left-wing Canadian party, socialist but not communist in outlook, which holds 13 seats in the Canadian Parliament and forms the government of the Province of Saskatchewan. There is nothing in his background to suggest that he would imperil the security of the United States by teaching French literature here or that he has been guilty of any moral lapses warranting his exclusion.

The Attorney General has an absolute power to exclude any alien. It is a dangerous power—one that should not be exercised arbitrarily or capriciously. Whenever it is exercised, there should be a stated reason to justify it. The terms "temporary exclusion" and "investigation" are fictions when they mask delay that makes the injury inflicted by them irreparable. Professor Shortliffe is reported to have declared that he now no longer wishes to come here but prefers, as he puts it, to remain in the free world. The insult to the American people, however harsh, seems understandable. And it is, of course, only an addition to the injury inflicted on them by their own Department of Justice.

Indian Summer

Nothing makes an expert on the seasons and their subdivisions cringe more than to hear the happy layman on any pleasant fall day exclaim to all he meets, "Well, this is real Indian summer!" Since this October has had so much unseasonably warm weather, the Indian summer publicists have had a field day. Now the time approaches when bona fide Indian summer may have to make its entry as an anticlimax. However, the expert on seasons will tell you the real thing is as different from the false as is a precious stone from a paste one—that no other time can duplicate those hazy, benign, nostalgic days that give us our final reprieve before winter steals in.

Just when are those magic days? As to that, authorities disagree, equivocate. After the first real frost, say some. The time of the full moon in November, say others. Webster plays safe by defining Indian summer as "a period of warm or mild weather late in autumn or in early winter." Weathermen say late October or early November, "usually." The Old Farmers' Almanac, which has no academic quibbles about being definite, comes right out and lists Indian summer as beginning November 22. It also set the first killing frost in 1949 for October 24 (but it is speaking primarily for New England) and it lists the next full moon for November 5. So there you are. Perhaps we might just as well go on calling "Indian summer" any beautiful autumn day that makes us feel so expansive that we want to tell everyone we meet about it.

LAMENT FOR THE HARVEST

These days brood over
The falling walls
Of centuries, the trampled clover,
The maimed cattle in their gutted stalls.
This is the season of the fruit, the crowning phase

Of all that went before, the centuries' slow mission.

These are the reddened harvest days,
Spilling fruition

Yet do not mourn for these. Oh do not weep
For a festering field,

For scorched flesh, and torn bewildered sheep,
Or any crop this earth can yield!
But mourn the ravaged dream, the hope-starred goal,

Which spired above the world's derision,
And now is brought to earth, Pity the soul
Of man, which grieves for the slain vision.

"In Re Yamashita"

Your October 24 editorial, "In Re Yamashita," brings to mind a question that must have occurred to many of us laymen taught to believe that our entire Anglo-Saxon concept of justice was based on a fair trial presided over by impartial judges. For a victor to judge a loser is like one ball team picking its own umpires. It we are going to have any international courts of law that create moral confidence in their decisions, they'll have to be presided over by judges from neutral countries. And atrocities by the winners as well as those by the losers will have to be punished.

False Americanism

It is the common lot of many Americans to boast of their Americanism, which is all well and good.

If they only possessed the spirit of tolerance, one toward another, their boasting would have some bearing toward influencing those they contact to become more trustworthy in both effort and deed.

Morality, common decency, justice and fair play are more closed attached to Americanism then many are wont to believe.

To adhere to American principles truly embraces all the fields of broader and tolerant living, thereby bringing into play the right of free speech though the speech be uttered by Jew or Gentile.

The true principles of democracy were not founded on vain words uttered by egotistic men of corrupt moral precept. They were founded and rooted in the soil of righteousness by men who feared God, and tried to advance liberty and religious freedom to all mankind.

The writer has many times contacted men who claimed to be loyal Americans in words, yet their very actions bespoke the corrupt principles they fostered. To be loyal to America is more than fluent word or gilded creed.

It is the loyal action according to the traditions of our forefathers who shed their blood and gave the full measure of devotion to all the finer concepts of life, to which honorable and noble men aspire.

Patent Advertising

Because of poorly informed attacks by men such as Mr. M. Belmont Ver Standig (owner of one of the larger advertising concerns) in his letter of October 23, the Patent Office finds itself unable to correct its overcrowded conditions.

Mr. Ver Standig notwithstanding, the people of the United States have seen fit to establish through their Congress the following: Suspension or exclusion from the Patent Office is provided for if the attorney or agent shall fail to submit advertising matter to the Commissioner of Patents, shall send out or use advertising matter not approved by the commissioner, or for an agent to misrepresent himself as a lawyer. Suspension or exclusion is provided as to agents or attorneys shown to refuse to comply with the rules and regulations, who (with intent to defraud in any manner) deceive, mislead or threaten any applicant or person having business or prospective business before the office by word, circular, letter or by advertising, who guarantee the successful prosecution of any application for patent, make false or misleading representations..., in advertising their business.

Furthermore, the fabulous opportunities believed to be connected with patents and trade marks has made the United States Patent Office a favorite target for the unauthorized practitioner. Their rules of practice do much to end the open solicitation of patent work by direct mail advertising and advertising in pulp magazines, holding out fantastic hopes of wealth to induce would-be inventors to intrust to the advertiser the legal work of preparing and prosecuting patent applications.

The Government (including Secretary of Commerce Sawyer) has therefore a clear mandate to control the "special interest" of advertising in the name of the "greater interest" of protecting the public at large.

Correction

In the October 24 letter of Mary-Stuart Chamberlain on Marine Corps morale the word "worst" was erroneously printed for the word "worth." Her sentence should have read ". . . the American people know from past performance the worth of the leathernecks and that esprit de corps which has written their record large across the pages of American history."

Nehru's Doctrine

President Truman, Eleanor Roosevelt and a host of dignitaries who have feted and honored Jawaharlal Nehru on his triumphant trip to this country evidently agree with Ralph Waldo Emerson that "Consistency is the hobgoblin of little minds."

The unassuming and direct-speaking Nehru, far from approving the present handling of the world peace problem by those who sing his praise, talks out against the fear psychosis that influences every act of the contending East and West, deplores the use of atom bomb diplomacy, declares India's neutrality and nonpartisanship between the embattled powers, and preaches that peace comes when people live in the ways of peace.

Jawaharlal Nehru is deserving of the honors being heaped upon him. He has shown courage in preaching such doctrine in the midst of the blind fury of the political and ideological battle. But his ideas and proposals do not differ from those of our own philosopher, Henry Wallace, whose preachment of a course indistinguishable from Nehru's has caused his ostracism.

If the comparison be challenged, reference is made to the full-page letter in the New York Times of September 18, 1946, addressed by Wallace to President Truman on July 23 of the same year.

"On 'Force And Violence'"

I have just read your October 23 editorial titled "On 'Force and Violence'" concerning the trial and sentencing of the leaders of the Communist Party. Certainly this is a matter which deserves fullest public debate in our country.

The first major point you make is that our country was born in revolution. This is very true and our American philosophy of what government is for was stated in the Declaration of Independence to be: "That to secure these rights (life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness) governments are instituted among men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed, that whenever any form of government becomes destructive of these ends, it is the right of the people to alter or to abolish it, and to institute new government, laying its foundation on such principles and organizing its powers in such form, as to them shall seem most likely to effect their safety and happiness."

Your second major point is that there is a vast gulf between the above doctrine and that embodied in the Smith Act, under which the Communists were tried and convicted. This is also true. The Smith Act makes teaching, speaking, writing illegal if the idea of changing the Government by means of force and violence is expressed. Thus, in 1776 the American people declared they not only had the right to advocate overthrowing the British Crown but they did it. According to the Smith Act in 1949 the American people have no such right.

Your third major point is that since these two doctrines are in opposition to each other "One is therefore obliged to postulate that the right of forcible revolution was obviated by the Constitution which made possible the alternation of the form of government by peaceful and legal means." You forget that one can also postulate that the Smith Act is unconstitutional.

But now we are getting to the crux of the matter—that which you refer to as "the great political dilemma of our time." It is true, the Constitution clearly does provide for alternation of the Government by peaceful means and the real meat of this guarantee is in the Bill of Rights, particularly in the first right: "Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; or abridging the freedom of speech, or of the press; or the right of the people peaceably to assemble, and to petition the Government for a redress of grievances."

This simply means we must have the right to talk and write advocate and assemble if we want to change things peaceably. But this is exactly what the Smith Act prohibits—in this case the right of the Communists to talk and write and advocate their ideas.

The Communists claimed in their trial that they never did advocate forceful overthrow of the Government. If they had ever committed any concrete act of that kind they could have been much more neatly tucked away than by the current method, which, of course, leaves the conclusion that they really haven't committed any acts. It boils down to the Smith Act charging: "Oh! yes, you do advocate forceful overthrow" and the prosecutor offering as evidence the documents of Karl Marx, Frederick Engels, Lenin and Stalin, written in a range from 25 to 100 years ago. And the Communist leaders have said "Oh, no, we have never advocated forceful overthrow" and they displayed their constitution, writings and speeches as evidence.

The Smith Act, in negating the Bill of Rights, is the real danger to America. It closes the doorway on free speech, press and assembly, and therefore, all free thinking. When that door is closed, just as the British Crown closed it in 1776, then the doorway to peaceful change is also closed, and people in past history have thrown out such tyrannies and probably will continue to do so if they are forced to it. There is no dilemma. Free the Communists and let them advocate their ideas and we will make our judgments as, heretofore, at the ballot box. Repeal the Smith Act or find it unconstitutional and keep open the doorway to peaceful social progress for our people.

Day In Court For Consumer

By Malvina Lindsay

Economic Town Halls

ONE RUNS more and more into the person who says grimly, "I'd just like to write 'em a letter." The reference is not to Congress but to some company that sells or manufactures clothing, food, furniture, appliances and other personal consumption goods for which Americans spend around 150 billion dollars yearly.

Usually this person is fatigued, frustrated, angered, by inadequate service or inability to find the product desired. This shopper may finally weaken and buy grudgingly what's to be had. Or she—or he—will stick out the chin and make do with what's on hand. The letter explaining what's wrong will likely not be written. People don't like to do "paper work," besides, they think, "What's the use?" Thus inventories increase and outmoded and perishable goods run higher the Nation's skyrocketing pile of waste.

Since the man who makes or sells the goods also has his legitimate but suppressed gripes about demanding and finicky customers, misunderstanding, even resentment, between buyers and sellers grows.

A SIGNIFICANT step in doing something about this has been taken by the National Consumer-Retailer Council through the grocer-consumer clinics it is sponsoring. In these, grocers and patrons tell each other what's wrong, reach a better understanding of each other's problems.

Such clinics should be extended to the entire field of retailing and manufacturing. Many consumers would like nothing better than to get into an economic town meeting in which they could tell off manufacturers about some of the fifth-wheel goods put on the market. Many consumers of clothing, particularly, would like to tell designers, as well as manufacturers, of some of the things they want but can't find.

And no doubt these manufacturers, retailers, buyers, executives, would jump at the chance to tell patrons a few of the facts of life concerning costs of operation and hoity-toity help.

The hackneyed theory, "we give the public what it wants," has long dominated mercantile as well as amusement fields. But as has been shown in the grocer-consumer clinics, there are products the public wants that makers and sellers aren't telepathic enough to know about. Sometimes business initiative and imagination provide these, but often designs and offerings in clothing, home comforts, office equipment, other products closely related to daily living, lag behind the needs of important segments of the population.

Rare is the consumer who wouldn't like to voice an opinion on a town meeting microphone about shoes, chairs, girdles, blouses, slips, ash trays, motor cars, doors, oversize bouquets, greeting card jingles and dozens of other homely matters.

ON EVERY side is heard the plaint of consumers about the time and energy spent in marketing and shopping of all kinds. Part of this is owing to long waits for service and to inexperienced and untrained help. Part is because the kind of article wanted is not made or must be sought all over town. In fact, the amount of time women in this land of plenty and "efficiency" spend in shopping is a national disgrace in view of the urgent need of their energies in helping meet family, social and political problems.

Since the bulk of shoppers is from families where income is from $40 to $100 a week, the "efficiency" that a fat pocketbook gives does not count. What is more, the job of the consumer is constantly growing. People are making more and spending more. This is especially true of clothing, the annual outlay for which is nearly 22½ billion dollars.

Most consumers need to know more about how the products they buy are made and distributed. They need to know why they can't get this or that and why they can't get waited on. Some effective work has been done by consumer surveys in developing cooperation between buyers and sellers. The American Home Economics Association and the Bureau of Human Nutrition and Home Economics of the Department of Agriculture have carried on good projects in that field.

But the more intimate association of the consumer clinic or the shoppers' town meeting is needed to bring about more meeting of minds and more efficiency in the market place. Those on both sides of the counter need a chance to get their gripes out of their systems.

Patrons' Revenge

The Capital Transit Co. patrons who object (rightly, I think) to being afflicted by highly commercialized radio programs should remember that as consumers the most elemental of all remedies is open to them.

If these individuals will write or telephone to the firms advertising over these programs, informing them that while they continue to advertise in this manner they (the consumer) will refuse to buy the firm's product or patronize its place of business and will urge their friends to do likewise, it will soon be found that no one will be willing to sponsor the programs.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

Three Weak Governments

BASLE, Switzerland.—Seen from the continent Mr. Attlee's decision to wait some months before holding an election adds much to the general feeling that Europe is drifting. In the key countries, in Britain, France, and in Germany, there are in fact no governments capable of making sustained and firm commitments at home or abroad.

Lippmann

The principal governments are provisional, without a clear mandate, without a long expectation of life, without certain policies, and without ideas except for the very short run.

THE ADENAUER government at Bonn rests on a precarious coalition. It has only a very narrow majority behind it even in Western Germany. Its majority could be upset by the mere inclusion of Western Berlin in the Bonn parliament. And it is confronted with the competition of the East German government—a competition which is likely to be much more formidable than our much too hasty and half-baked declarations have cared to recognize.

In France the coalition of the moderates which has administered French affairs for the past year does not have an effective working majority. There is no near prospect of a government that can do much more than carry on the administration of the government departments.

The weakness of government on the continent could be compensated if there were a strong British government which knew its mind and could take the lead. But in fact the condition of the continent is enormously complicated by the fact that there is no British government with a certain mandate and a clear policy on any important European question. Nobody knows where Britain is going since the British themselves do not know, and are proposing to wait some months before they decide which party is to have the power to decide where they are going to go. Everyone is compelled to assume that the British will not be able to make up their minds until there has been an election, and many are wondering whether even then the election will be decisive if the full impact of the economic trouble—now cushioned and postponed—has not yet made itself felt inside the British Isle. No one can be certain that even the coming elections will be decisive enough to set the British government on any clear and certain course.

Thus events are in the saddle, and the statesmen and politicians of these weak governments can do little more than hope that they will not be carried along helplessly by events.

ON ALL the great questions—on the defense of Europe, on the unity and pacification of Germany and on her place in a European system, on the economic reconstruction of Europe—there is a strong tendency even among the experts and technicians to wait and see rather than to think and plan. They all know that the rise of Germany must alter radically the whole European situation, the relations of the members of the Atlantic community and the position of the West in the presence of the Soviet Union. They know that the strategic estimates of last year must somehow be reviewed and revised after the Soviet achievement of the atomic bomb and in the light of the formidable criticism of strategic air policy by the United States Navy. They know that the devaluations mark the end of the first phase of the Marshall Plan and that European recovery now demands a great European reorganization and reconstruction.

But there are no accepted ideas of policy for dealing with these new developments. There is not even a reasonably definite choice of ideas from among which, after debate, an accepted policy might emerge. I should suppose there will not be ideas until there are governments in Britain and in France, or perhaps in Germany, strong enough to carry out ideas. For men who realize that they lack the power to act except in little matters and for the short run are disposed not to think too much about big matters and the long run.

THUS THE burden on the United States is increasing, not so much in the material sense as in the intellectual and spiritual. Europe needs something more than the bombs, the dollars, and the anti-Communist declarations which—at this distance—appear now to be our principal contribution to the comfort of the world's anxieties and the cure of its difficulties. Europe needs very much indeed to have restored to it the conviction that we are still searching for righteousness and are not merely reiterating how everlasting right and righteous we have always been. For while the power of the United States is tremendous, its influence for good is declining—perhaps because the Truman Administration have had so much power that they have forgotten the imponderables on which a lasting influence must rest.

Sweden's Regulation

By Marquis Childs

Planning Replacing Free Economy

STOCKHOLM, Sweden—The split across the European continent between east and west is obvious enough. But there is another division that is becoming more apparent with the passage of time.

Childs

The Scandinavian countries and Great Britain form what for lack of a better term might be called a Socialist bloc. In contrast to the trend in the rest of Europe, they have continued to evolve in the general direction of the welfare state. And if the recent election in Norway was any indication, that is what most people in this part of the world want.

In each of these countries, earnest and hard-working governments, recruited for the most part from the labor movement, are carrying out a broad degree of economic planning. This is partly to counter the postwar inflation. But also, and more important, it is in line with a deliberate full-employment policy intended to prevent the ups and downs of the business cycle.

This means restriction and regulation. It means a calculated tax policy aimed at keeping purchasing power at a high level and profits at a comparatively low level.

THE MEN carrying out this policy, overburdened and hard-pressed as they are, tend to look with suspicion and even distrust on those nations that are following a more or less free and untrammeled course, letting prices seek their level without benefit of controls. They are particularly distrustful of continental nations that seem to be enjoying a flush of prosperity under the banner of free enterprise.

It is believed here that this seeming prosperity, and this applies especially to Germany and Italy, is an uncertain quantity. Free enterprise in devastated Europe is considered within the Socialist bloc to be at best an ersatz product created for the benefit of America.

This suggests the nature of a division in western Europe that can have serious consequences as the countries on the Continent move more and more to the right. Out of the growing distrust can come a kind of isolationism.

The effort to buttress the economy against all possible shocks, both from within and without, calls for an increasing concentration of control. Here in Sweden the increasing degree of control has called forth a protest that seems to me to be, in its intensity and bitterness, a new phenomenon for this country.

You hear from the middle class the complaint that the Government intends now to level everyone down to the same condition. Nothing is left after taxes for the small luxuries that gave variety and color to life. And those same luxuries are now so very expensive.

THE INDUSTRIALIST is bitter about taxes and price control. He complains that under present tax laws the worker has no incentive to do more than a limited amount of work. Absenteeism rises after payday. The businessman protests that present high tax rates take so much that little or nothing is left to invest in new enterprise.

Very little has been done to free the movement of trade even among the Scandinavian countries. An army of customs inspectors on the border of each country fill out forms and levy their charges.

Perhaps the complaint and the protest produce a postwar phenomenon that will diminish as the world moves toward something nearer normal. But even the loudest complainers do not appear to hope ever to turn out the present government and replace it with one more moderate and conservative.

Nor do the Labor-Socialist administrators regard it as likely that their work will be interrupted by political reversal. They consider that they are making the practical alterations necessary to keep the economy on an even keel. With families included, at least half the voting population is in the trade unions and they are grateful for the benefits and pensions of their Labor government.

So, as one of the younger men in the top trade union administration put it, why debate political ideas? Let the other side use the big words, we're too busy carrying out the practical changes that are essential. This carefully managed economy, in which the freedoms of speech and religion are carefully preserved, is in a sense a new kind of society that has no resemblance to the totalitarianism of the East and little resemblance to the planless free enterprise of the West.

Southern Small Loan Firms Indicted in Antitrust Case

By Robert S. Allen

The Justice Department yesterday resorted to the antitrust laws for a sensational crackdown on "high-rate" money lenders in 23 Southern and Western States.

The indictment and a voluminous bill of particulars were filed in Federal Court in San Antonio, Tex.

Chief defendant in the indictment is Rufus DeWitt King, multimillionaire small loan broker of Miami, Fla. One hundred and twenty other defendants are named in the indictment.

The Justice Department also filed a long list of witnesses whom it "may call" at the forthcoming trial. Prominent among them are the following.

Claude Taylor, recently appointed Supreme Court Justice of South Carolina, who once represented money-lending concerns in South Carolina. Pierce Stevenson, brother of former Gov. Coke Stevenson of Texas. Included in the bill of particulars are checks totaling more than $30,000 that Pierce Stevenson received from the money lenders.

Case Begun in 1944

The case was begun in 1944. Harold A. Henderson, antitrust division attorney, presented the Government's evidence before the grand jury that handed down the indictment. The jury was made up largely of south Texas ranchers.

It is reliably understood that strenuous undercover efforts were made to persuade former Attorney General Tom Clark to drop the case. He refused.

King, formerly of Atlanta, controls two giant money-lending concerns. They are Triangle Securities Trust Co. and the United Operating Co. In a seven-year period, Triangle paid more than $5,800,000 in net profits to King and his family. Peak earnings exceeded one million dollars.

In addition to the canceled checks paid Pierce Stevenson, the Government also introduced as evidence letters from King's files regarding payments made to Emmet Morse, speaker of the Texas House in 1939. One of these letters reads as follows:

"As soon as this money was paid to the Speaker (Morse), things really began to happen. All of the bills in the banking committee, by resolution of the speaker, were taken out of this committee and placed in the Committee on State Affairs. At the hearing on these bills, a subcommittee was appointed, each member of which is a trusted man of the speaker, and at present writing, all of these bills are in this subcommittee. It is Mr. Duvall's (a lobbyist) plan to keep these bills in subcommittee as long as possible. If too much pressure is put on this subcommittee they will have one of the bills reported upon unfavorably. In any event the subcommittee is going to withhold their reports until sometime the first part of April."

According to the indictment, loans made by the 120 defendants totaled more than 100 million dollars annually from 1939 to 1944. Most of the loans ranged from $5 to $60.

The indictment charged that shockingly high interest rates were collected from the impoverished persons who borrowed the small sums. Twenty percent a month was the usual interest charge.

The indictment also accuses King of driving another big money-lending firm out of business because it charged a lower interest rate. This was the Drake chain which operated in the Carolinas and Midwest.

"Harry L. Drake was subjected to various forms of duress and harassment," the bill of particulars declares. "He was constantly shadowed and followed by strangers at night and during the day. He received many mysterious telephone calls in which his life was threatened. As a result of this psychological warfare, the Drakes decided to sell their chain of loan offices."

They were taken over by King.

Others Charged

Other leading defendants in the case are:

J. Lee Wilson and E. J. Baxter, operating as a partnership in Texas and Arkansas; W. Lee Moore, with offices in Texas, Kansas, Alabama and the Carolinas; Ison Brothers, an Atlanta partnership with branches in six Southern States and Missouri; Claude E. Crowe, with branches in Alabama and Texas; the Samuel D. Bell chain, with holdings in 11 finance companies in Georgia and the Carolinas; Lew D. French, with branches in five Southern States; E. B. Terrell & Co., in Texas and Missouri; the Oscar D. White chain, operating in five Southern States and Colorado; and the Tom B. Slider chain, in four Southeastern States.

Boys Give $37 Dance Profits To Chest Drive

The Community Chest got some more boosts yesterday.

Nine members of the Blue Lions, a club for teen-age boys, gave Campaign Chairman Frank J. Luchs $37.07 they collected by giving a dance last Saturday night as a Community Chest benefit.

Chest leaders announced management and labor are getting together to give craftsmen and laborers "on the job" a chance to contribute to the campaign. Campaign leaders hope to reach some 20,000 craftsmen and laborers employed in the local construction industry through Business Unit solicitation while they work.

Yesterday, as a reminder that the Community Chest is their business, too, a poster bearing the legend "Pledge Now—Pay Later" went up for workers at the 22-million-dollar General Accounting Office construction project. The workers will be solicited by joint management-union teams during the campaign.

As a reminder of things to come, Chest headquarters gave more details on the residential unit rally at the Mayflower Hotel Tuesday November 1 at 12:30 p. m.

The rally will be addressed by Miss Helen E. Hokinson, cartoonist of clubwomen in the New Yorker magazine, and Mrs. Eugene Meyer, journalist and wife of the chairman of the board of The Washington Post.

Mrs. Meyer will discuss the importance of the Community Chest Federation in basic programs affecting the entire community.

Subject of Miss Hokinson's address has not been announced. A possible clew to it came in her recent statement that she is not satirizing the clubwomen whom she draws. "They are really our best people," she said.

Court Ruling Approves Sale Of Newspaper

By Chalmers M. Roberts
Post Reporter

Judge Alexander Holtzoff yesterday approved the first account of the executors of the Eleanor Patterson estate.

The action, in effect, confirmed the sale of the Washington Times-Herald to the Chicago Tribune. The order followed criticism by Register of Wills Theodore Cogswell of initial proposals for the disposal of $2,800,000 in stock of the McCormick-Patterson Trust to the seven Times-Herald executives to whom Mrs. Patterson willed the newspaper. They subsequently sold the newspaper to the Tribune for $4,500,000.

Cogswell called the stock sale "illegal," and he reported the seven men have rescinded the transaction. In his memorandum to Judge Holtzoff, Cogswell also criticized "dual representation" by a law firm of both the Patterson estate executors in the stock transaction and Col. Robert R. McCormick and the Tribune, which he publishes.

Judge Holtzoff ordered the law firm of Kirkland, Fleming, Green, Martin and Ellis to withdraw as representatives of the executors.

Attorneys Louis G. Caldwell and Charles R. Cutler of the firm's Washington office had been representing the three Patterson estate executors, two of whom are among the seven who inherited the paper—William C. Shelton and Frank C. Waldrop. Shelton is business manager and Waldrop editor of the Times-Herald.

Holtzoff later complimented Cogswell in a letter for his "investigation" which disclosed what the judge termed the "impropriety" of one of the counsel involved in the 16-million-dollar Patterson estate. Cogswell and his chief deputy, Melvin J. Marques, have been working on the case almost constantly since October 9.

Cogswell noted that he was "of the opinion that none of the parties concerned was motivated by any improper intent."

He said that "after numerous and lengthy conferences as to the best method of restoring the estate in status quo with respect to all of the objectionable transactions, a number of new instruments have been executed by all parties" rescinding the stock sale and restoring the stock and interest paid on it to the estate. The Tribune Company also has given a deed to a parking lot next door to the Times-Herald building on H st. nw., to be held in escrow pending court determination of just who owns it under Mrs. Patterson's will.

Besides Shelton and Waldrop, the other five who are involved are Edmund F. Jewell, Michael W. Flynn, H. A. Robinson, J. Irving Belt and Mason S. Peters.

Cogswell considered as "objectionable" this feature of the Times-Herald sale contract:

The seven executives, in selling the newspaper, agreed in the same document to "purchase out of their respective shares of the proceeds when available to them, a total of 78 of the 272½ units of the McCormick-Patterson Trust owned by the estate for a consideration of $35,000 for each unit or a total of $2,730,000."

The seven subscribed this way: Shelton, 12 units, $420,000; Waldrop, 18 units, $630,000; Jewell, 8 units, $280,000; Flynn, 10 units, $350,000; Robinson, 8 units, $280,000; Belt, 10 units, $350,000, and Peters, 12 units, $420,000. Subsequently Waldrop subscribed to an additional two units bringing the over-all proposed purchases to 80 shares worth $2800,000.

The stock was sold with a promissory note for five years at 1 percent interest as security and the agreement "specifically provided that the executors were to receive the dividends on each unit of approximately $2500 per year from and after August 15, 1949, and, if the sale was for any reason not approved or set aside" any such income was "not to be refunded by the executives to the estate."

Cogswell declared that the seven executives including the two executors, Shelton and Waldrop, "were personally profiting at the expense of the residuary estate by purchasing estate assets with a deferred purchase money 5-year 1 percent promissory note . . ." He said the effect of this transaction was "to substitute for an asset returning approximately 7 percent" or $2500 a year a note at 1 percent or $350 a year.

With respect to Shelton and Waldrop, Cogswell added, "this transaction would have resulted in a secret profit to them at the expense of the estate which is clearly forbidden by law."

Cogswell pointed out his opinion that taxes of Mrs. Patterson's estate plus debts and expenses "exhaust practically the entire residuary estate." Mrs. Patterson, who died July 24, 1948, provided her residuary estate was to go to a number of charities, particularly those to aid homeless and orphan children.

Judge Holtzoff in yesterday's order also stated that no fees beyond July 18, 1949, be paid to the firm of Kirkland, Fleming, Green, Martin & Ellis. He gave the firm the right to apply for "allowances for compensation for services" during the period from February 9 to July 18.

Cogswell, in reporting on the attorneys' "dual representation" in the case, said it appears the estates executors "were placed in a position of dealing with a purchaser, supposedly at arm's length, who was in possession of all the facts and circumstances surrounding the estate which had a bearing on the value of the asset to be sold and the necessity and desirability of sale . . ."

He said the executors reported the following counsel fees: to the Kirkland firm, $100,000; to William E. Leahy in connection with the contest of the will by Mrs. Patterson's daughter, Countess Felicia Gizycka, $50,000; to Jackson, Nash, Brophy, Barringer & Brooks in the same connection $60,000; to Joseph W. Brooks, the third executor, for partial service as executor, $25,000, and $30,000 to the accounting firm of Price, Waterhouse & Co. Cogswell objected to the termination date involved in the fees to the Kirland and Jackson firms but said he did not consider the amounts "exorbitant." The will contest case was settled out of court last February 9.

Leaning Toward Western Ideas

India Called Democracy's Best Bulwark Against Advance of Communism in Far East

By Margaret Parton
(Eighth in a Series)

Calcutta. (NYHT)—As Communism solidifies China and becomes an increasing threat to Southeast Asia, India looms large as democracy's firmest bulwark in the East. Certainly no other Asian country offers as much hope as India with her comparatively stable government and her basically democratic ideals.

India, while she tries to remain neutral in the East-West war, shows growing signs of preference for Western ideas.

Since India is a pivotal point in Asia's fight against communism, her apparent turn toward the West is of vital importance. Strategically she dominates the Indian Ocean and the western approaches to Southeast Asia. Potentially she forms Asia's largest military base left to the democracies. Her supplies of man power are vast. She is a source of coal, manganese, iron, mica and some petroleum. She has one of the world's largest steel works.

Radical Groups Fragmentary

Asia's Communists are, of course, eager to get their hands on this invaluable base. While there seems little prospect of their success at the moment, their activities may yet give cause for serious concern.

India's sister dominion, Pakistan, is not industrialized, even to the extent of India. Radical groups are fragmentary and are kept under by strong government. Islam is a powerful counteraction to Communist ideology—although perhaps not quite so powerful as Moslems like to believe.

Politically, the impact on India and Pakistan of the Communist victories in China has been less than on other Eastern countries. Geographically, they are farther removed than the Southeast Asia nations which lie directly in the path of Communist influence. More important is their preoccupation with internal affairs and with each other.

Indian Reds a Problem

The Indian Communist party, however, is a very real problem to Indian leaders. Banned in prewar days, it emerged as a force during the war when it cooperated with the Allies in opposition to the Gandhi-led Indian National Congress party. Following the war, Indian Communists infiltrated into agrarian groups and several trade unions, and, working peacefully, were making considerable headway.

In March, 1948, at a momentous Calcutta meeting, they switched their peaceful policy (probably at the direction of the U. S. S. R.). They made what has proved a major error in timing and judgment. A program of direct action was adopted.

In the last year railroads have been sabotaged, riots organized and landlords murdered.

Communist party membership is now estimated at under 100,000, out of a population of 337,000,000. Their influence, however is far wider, particularly among student groups.

Thus far the government has used strong measures to suppress unlawful Communist activities Nehru has not hesitated to use force where necessary and to throw more than 1000 Communist ringleaders in jail. In their zeal to avert Communism, the Indians have sometimes caught in their net Socialists and trade union leaders whose only offense was to voice criticism of the government. The press sometimes has been muzzled beyond the limits of liberal reason.

Among passionate, freedom-loving Indians this kind of thing naturally has a bad effect. But chances of Communist success in Indian seem remote at the moment—at least more remote than in Indo-China or even Burma. The Indian National Congress, which led India to freedom and now controls the country, still evokes great loyalty among the Indian people. Hinduism, too, with its age-old patterns governing every phase of life, is a factor.

Economic Gains Needed

Many Indians and some Westerners would like to believe that these factors, plus strong police action, are enough to hold back Communism in Indian for all time. But they are not, any more than the factors of religion, apathy and repressive policies holding back Communism in China. Given another five or ten years without visible economic improvement and without implementation of the noble sentiments of the new Indian constitution, the disillusioned Indian masses might very easily turn toward a philosophy which seemed to offer them a better way of life.

Fortunately, most thinking men in Indian realize this. "Fundamentally you cannot control ideas by police methods," the Prime Minister said, "you can only control them by economic and social means." This is India's secondary, long-term approach to her Communist problem.

U. S. Civilians in Germany Get Taste of 'Occupation'

Frankfurt, Oct. 26 (AP).—The ordinary American civilian in Germany is getting a little taste of what it's like to be an occupied people.

He's getting it from some soldiers of his own Army, which makes it doubly bitter.

In a changeover which began last July, most American civilians in Germany, excluding Army and State Department employes, were ordered to live on the German economy. This meant German lodgings, food and transportation, among other things. Civilians were barred from Army theaters, stores, gas stations and similar installations.

To the average soldier, the civilian became undistinguishable from the German population.

An American who entered a military post building was startled when a soldier elbowed him into a corner and grated: "What're you doin' here? This building ain't for Krauts." The building actually was open to Germans.

An American newspaperman, driving a German-made car at night, passed a sedan filled with soldiers. They shot past him, cutting in short and forcing him to swerve to avoid a collision. Then they reversed their spotlight and played it into his eyes.

A civilian escorting a woman gets used to "approaches" from soldiers who think they are a German couple.

Fluorine Used To Cut Youths' Tooth Trouble

New York, Oct. 26 (AP).—Tooth troubles in children have been cut 30 percent by adding fluorine to a town's drinking water.

This benefit, from only tiny amounts of the chemical added to the water supply, was reported at the American Public Health Association's annual meeting here.

The fluorine was put in the drinking water of the town of Newburgh, N. Y., starting three years ago. The effect on children's teeth was measured by comparing them with the teeth of children in Kingston, N. Y., 30 miles away, where no fluorine was used.

The number of permanent teeth found to be decayed, missing or filled among Newburgh children declined from 21 per 100 permanent teeth to 14.8, said Dr. Davis B. Ast, director of the State Bureau of Dental Health. The Kingston children still showed 21.3 decayed, missing or filled teeth per 100 permanent teeth.

Younger children showed the greatest benefit, he said in a report prepared jointly with Dr. Sidney F. Finn and Isabel McCaffery.

Adults are not benefitted much, if at all, by drinking the water with fluorine. The fluorine is used in the proportion of one part per million parts of water.

CAA Revokes Hayter's Flying License

Santa Monica, Calif., Oct. 26 (AP). The Civil Aeronautics Authority revoked James L. Hayter's pilot license yesterday for his flying tactics in the October 1 plane crash that killed Crooner Buddy Clark.

The ruling of CAA Trial Examiner Joseph C. Caldwell, jr., climaxed a hearing in which the 27-year-old airman was charged with reckless and careless flying. His license was revoked for six months.

Vice Squad Raid Nets 3 Women

The police vice squad raided an alleged "daylight hours" disorderly house yesterday afternoon and arrested three women, at least two of whom have police records. Two men patrons found in the place were taken to headquarters for questioning.

The place, according to Lieut. Roy Blick, head of the vice squad, was a first-floor apartment at 1128 10th st. nw.

Arrested were Mildred Williams, 33, who was charged with operating a disorderly house and vagrancy; Catherine Bennett, 34, and Dorothy (Betty) Graham, 33, both charged with vagrancy. Mildred Williams was released in $800 bond and the other two in $300 bond each for appearance in Municipal Court today.

Lieutenant Blick said his squad had an arrest warrant for entry into the neatly furnished apartment. He said observation had shown it operated only in daylight hours.

Police records show Mildred Williams was arrested last February in a raid in the same building, and Dorothy Graham was arrested last May in the vicinity. Blick said Dorothy Graham was arrested here in 1944 in the notorious "Hopkins Institute" vice case.

3 D. C. Youths Admit Robbery

Three Washington youths yesterday pleaded guilty in Arlington Circuit Court to charges of robbing J. L. Heatwole, restaurant owner, of $900 last July.

Charged with robbing Heatwole, who lives at 4140 Lorcum la., Arlington, after beating him a club and brass knuckles, were Charles Riddle, jr., 30, of 1871 Newton st. nw.; James H. Sebastian, 25, of 1346 Fairmont st. nw.; and James Shively, 17, of 2740 14th st. nw.

Charges against Ruth Colton, 20, of 1358 Fairmont st. nw. originally accused of participating in the robbery, were dropped yesterday. Commonwealth's Attorney Denman T. Rucker said there was insufficient evidence against her.

Judge Walter T. McCarthy deferred sentencing of the three defendants to December 2, pending a probation officer's report. Under Virginia law they may get the death penalty, life imprisonment or a minimum sentence of eight years.

According to testimony at an earlier hearing, Heatwole, who is 50, was ambushed near his home by the youths and a juvenile companion, as he returned from Britt's Cafeteria at 1211 Wisconsin ave. nw. with the day's receipts.

newspapers. Both Representative Smith and Fischbach were present.

Davis said after the meeting that it would be left to Fischbach to select the two investigators and secretary allowed by the House in its appropriation of $10,000 for the crime study.

Fischbach said he would start to work immediately on selection of a staff and other preliminaries. His headquarters will be in House District Committee office.

He promised careful preparation of the evidence to be presented in later public hearings, and said the investigation will be conducted with complete impartiality and objectivity.

Chicago, Oct. 26 (U.P.).—A second woman in the love life of Sigmund Engel, 73, today testified he charmed her into marriage, cried at the wedding, persuaded her to sell her home and vanished with the liquid assets.

For the first time in his trial on swindling charges, the suave Engel lost his composure. He leaped to his feet and brandished a fist at the prosecution.

"You're a bunch of crooks," he cried. "It's a lot of hooey. Such a story you put in her mouth."

Engel's attorney hurried him out of court.

The witness was Mrs. Annetta Kubiak, 39-year-old divorcee from South Bend, Ind.

Engel is accused of swindling Mrs. Reseda Corrigan, red-haired Chicago widow, out of $8700. Mrs. Kubiak was called to show intent on the part of Engel.

She testified Engel used the same approach as with Mrs. Corrigan, telling her she resembled his dead wife.

He posed as wealthy and influential "H. Paul Moore," she said, and persuaded her to marry him.

She said Engel persuaded her to sell her home for $12,000, $5000 of it in cash and the rest in mortgages. He took the cash, she said.

He vanished, Mrs. Kubiak said, after getting her to give her furs, silver and automobile away.

On cross-examination, Defense Attorney Allan Block tried to get her to admit her testimony contradicted allegations in a $200,000 damage suit she filed against Engel.

"I don't know what's in that damage thing," Mrs. Corrigan said. "My lawyer drew that up.

"You're a lawyer, you know you make things up," she said accusingly to Block."

Spectators howled.

They said they had sent Contreras Tapia to enforced residence in the extreme southern province of Chile.

Ex-Sheriff Identified as Masked Raider

Birmingham, Ala., Oct. 26 (AP)—The woman victim of hooded hoodlums today identified Coleman A. (Brownie) Lollar, former special deputy sheriff, as one of the masked men who raided her home last June 10.

The witness was Mrs. Edna McDanal, 42-year-old grandmother whose home was broken into by robed men who forced her to watch a cross burning on her lawn.

Mrs. McDanal

Lollar

Lollar is charged with flogging while masked in the McDanal case. That offense is punishable by imprisonment from one to 10 years. He also is charged with the same offense in four other cases, and with first degree burglary.

The burglary indictment is based on charges of breaking and entering an occupied dwelling at night. It is a capital charge under Alabama law.

The former special officer is the first to face trial of a group of 18 men indicted by grand juries here after a wave of masked mob violence last May and June.

Mrs. McDanal, the first witness, pointed out Lollar as one of 10 or 12 men who broke into her home. She recognized Lollar, she said, "when I pulled his hood up to look at his face."

The witness said the men jerked a shotgun from her hands, hit her twice with "I don't know what," and dragged her outside.

"All of them had pistols," she testified. "They threatened to whip me, and accused me of selling whisky and renting my rooms to couples."

The case is being heard before Judge Robert J. Wheeler, who sentenced Klan director William Hugh Morris to jail for contempt of court for refusal to produce Klan membership lists.

Morris spent 67 days in jail before he wrote a partial list from memory and was released.

Lollar denied to reporters that he was a member of the Klan.

Welfare State Trend Blasted By Johnson

By S. Oliver Goodman

The trend toward a welfare state will change us from a nation of rugged individuals to one of ragged individuals, Calvin D. Johnson told local businessmen last night.

C. D. Johnson

Johnson, former Republican Congressman from Illinois, addressed the twenty-fifth anniversary meeting of the Federation of Business Men's Association in the Mayflower. Speaking on "Politics vs. Private Enterprise," Johnson viewed the Administration's demands for socialized medicine, bigger pensions and grants as leading toward socialism and "socialism is the first step toward totalitarism."

He also denounced the trend toward heavier spending and additional taxes. Quoting Robert Doughton, chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, Johnson said: "You can shear a sheep many times, but you can only skin it once."

Installed as president of the F. B. M. A., an organization of 35 local business and professional associations with a membership of about 5000 persons, was Jerome B. McKee. Other newly inducted officers were: Dr. Leo F. Diegelmann, first vice president; Leo Hessler, second vice president; John L. C. Sullivan, treasurer, and Louis Fricke, secretary.

B. & O. NET SLUMPS: The Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, hard-hit by the coal strike, reported September net income of $54,348 against $2,134,143 for the same 1948 month. For the nine months ended September 30, net totaled $7,527,528 against $16,534,709 in the corresponding period last year.

NEW IBA OFFICERS: Joseph W. Sener of Baltimore yesterday was elected chairman of the Southeastern Group, Investment Bankers Association of America, at a meeting here in the Metropolitan Co. Sener succeeded James H. Lemon of Johnston, Lemon & Co. of Washington. W. Peyton May of Norfolk and W. Carroll Mead of Baltimore were elected vice chairmen of the regional group. John C. Hagan, jr., of Richmond, was chosen secretary-treasurer. Elected to the executive committee in addition to the above officers were: Wilfred L. Goodwin, jr., of Goodwyn & Olds, Washington; J. Murrey Atkins of Charlotte, N. C.; Richard P. Dunn of Auchincloss, Parker & Redpath, Washington; Edward K. Dunn of Baltimore.

Gold Diggers Race Winter At 15 Below

Fishwheel, Alaska, Oct. 26 (U.P.). Prospectors dug into the frozen earth in 15 below zero weather today in a frenzied effort to strike gold before the Arctic winter seals in this booming tent town.

Bush pilots warned a sudden end to the "unusually mild weather" might wipe out the horde of gold seekers who have poured in since a fisherman found gold five days ago.

Many prospectors staked claims and went home until spring. But more than 100 braved the cold to pan for metal, despite geologists' warnings there was little chance of a major strike in this area, near the Arctic Circle.

Bush pilot Bill Magoffin warned that poor flying weather could cut off the "airlift" to Fishwheel.

"If the 30 to 40 below weather sets in, it could be bad," he said. "That kind of weather could freeze men faster than the pilots could take them out."

The gold rush was a sure thing for gamblers, prostitutes and bush pilots.

A new gold discovery yesterday heightened hopes. Veteran prospector "Ramblin' Sam" Gamblin said he saw a nugget "big as a man's thumbnail" taken from the south bank of the ice-coated Yukon River. He said it was only a quarter of a mile from the spot where Clifton Carroll, a fisherman, found nuggets in his fishwheel.

Klondike Kate Scorns Pea-Size Gold Nuggets

Jefferson, Oreg., Oct. 26 (U.P.).—Klondike Kate, "the Belle of the Yukon," who once earned $750 a night dancing for Alaskan sourdoughs, pooh-poohed the gold strike at Fishwheel today.

"So they've found nuggets the size of peas?" asked Kate, known formally as Mrs. W. L. Van Duren. "Is that all the larger they are? Why, I've got a necklace with half a dozen nuggets larger than that."

Kate said she and her husband would stay on their farm here.

Earth's Life Began in Ice, Dr. Urey Says

Rochester, N. Y., Oct. 26 (AP).—The chemistry of life originated on earth in giant snow, hail and ice storms more than a billion years ago.

This report was made to the National Academy of Sciences today by Dr. Harold Urey, University of Chicago. Urey, one of the world's foremost chemists, gave a new theory of the earth's origin, based on the chemical compounds that exist today in the earth's surface.

Dr. Urey backed up his story of what happened on earth by what happened simultaneously on the moon, Mars and Venus. The chemistry on all three is different from the earth and from each other, but Urey said the differences are what would be expected due to the different temperatures and sizes of each.

Dr. Urey said the present chemical composition of earth shows that water had to come first. It had to be cold water, too, because if it had been hot to start with the earth's chemistry would have been different.

This same chemistry, Urey said, indicates the earth, moon and other planets formed from dust clouds about two billion years ago. The dust contained all the chemical elements.

The dust was cold at first. Gradually it warmed because some of it was radioactive. Additional warmth came from gravitational pressure of the growing dust ball. Water formed while the surface was still icy cold.

The heating from the interior continued until, about a billion years ago, it was hot enough to account for the chemical compounds now found in the surface.

Another new thing is Urey's explanation of the earth's iron core. Astronomers have held this iron core formed when the earth was a molten ball, because there would be no other way for iron to sink to the center.

Not so, said Urey. He showed some simple chemistry by which the iron scattered all through the original dust ball would sink to the center. In so doing he accounts in a new way for formation of the continents, their drifting motions, the lost continents and formation of the Pacific Ocean. He accounts also for the alternate tropical and frigid climates of the Arctics and of all southern continents.

Russians Claim 'First' in World Peace Union Idea

By The Associated Press

Russia has laid claim to a new "first."

The Soviet radio, which often credits Russians with pioneering in many fields, said in a domestic broadcast recorded yesterday by United States Government monitors:

"The idea of forming an international organization for the support of peace and security came from the Soviet Union, from Comrade Stalin. Already in 1944 Comrade Stalin voiced the idea of the necessity of forming an organization for the defense of peace and the safeguarding of security from among the representatives of peace-loving nations."

That, of course, is not the way American officials understand it. Cordell Hull was called "the father of the U. N." by President Roosevelt when Hull retired as Secretary of State in November, 1944.

Hull went to Moscow in 1943 with the prime aim of enlisting Stalin's support to a postwar world security organization.

Joe Kuhel Signed as Manager of Kansas City

MAINSTAYS OF GEORGE WASHINGTON COLONIALS IN FRIDAY NIGHT'S HOMECOMING GAME WITH LAFAYETTE COLLEGE AT GRIFFITH STADIUM.

Former Nats' Pilot Returns to Home Town

New York, Oct. 26 (AP).—Joe Kuhel, recently released as Washington manager after a 2-year term, today signed to manage the Kansas City Blues, New York Yankee farm of the American Association.

So Kuhel returns to Kansas City, his home town, where he played in 1928-29-30 before moving to the majors.

Kuhel, a veteran major leave first baseman from 1930 to 1947, replaces Bill Skiff who bossed the Blues last summer.

In announcing the signing of Kuhel, George Weiss, Yankee vice president and general manager, said "Skiff remains a valued member of the Yankee organization in another capacity.

Dismissal of Kuhel by Clark Griffith came shortly before the start of the World Series after the Washington Club had finished in the American League cellar.

The 43-year-old Kuhel finished his active career with the Chicago White Sox in 1947, taking the job of managing Hot Springs, Ark., of the Cotton States League

Griffith revealed yesterday he recently had been contacted by Del Webb, a Yankee co-owner, for a recommendation on Kuhel.

Simmons Says He Was Fired as A's 'Goat'

Hot Springs, Ark., Oct. 26 (AP). Al Simmons said today he was fired as a coach of the Philadelphia Athletics because a "goat" had to be found for the A's 1949 showing and because he and Earle Mack never got along.

"I was fired for two reasons—because the club finished fifth when it was supposed to finish third, and a goat or goats had to be found; because Earle Mack and I never got along," Simmons said.

Post Contest Winner Picks SMU Score

Hall

WILLIAM E. HALL, 3121 Mt. Pleasant st., nw., got the best of seven others in last weeks' Washington Post football contest the hard way.

Hall predicted that Southern Methodist would defeat Kentucky, 20-7. And that's exactly what the Mustangs won by.

The 34-year-old Pepco stock clerk became the first winner to call the tie-breaker right on the head. He and the others had two wrong in the 20 games.

Hall, an avid sports fan, plans to take wife, Betty, on the all-expense trip for two to the Army-Navy classic. In addition, he gets four tickets to the Maryland-South Carolina game at College Park Saturday.

THE WEEK'S CHAMP over 16,243 contestants says he gets his information from The Washington Post's sports pages.

Closest to Hall were Albert Katz who picked SMU to win by 14-7 and James H. Echols who thought it would be SMU, 21-14.

The runnersup, only the first two picked SMU, include Albert Katz, 351 Raleigh st., se.; James H. Echols, 633 G st., sw.; Daniel J. Sweeney, 2031 F st., nw.; David M. Schiller, 2800 Wisconsin ave., nw.; John G. Irwin, 1852 Columbia rd., nw.; E. H. Edwards, 5132 Hanna pl., nw.; Albert L. D'Epiro, 2804 Erie st., se.

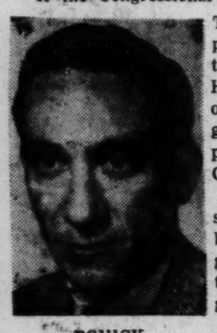
This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

Blue Plate Special:

THE WIFFY COX COUNTRY CLUB, er-pardon, the Congressional Country Club, is heaving a party tonight in honor of its proudest possession, the club pro. It will be co-ed, with members and their wives assembled to raise a toast to Wiffy Cox, and there will be speeches, the best of which will probably be made as usual by Cox himself.

If the Congressional people are beloved of Cox, no wonder.



POVICH

Their club is all bound up in the big league personality of the man who gives it distinction. No journeyman professional is Wiffy. He moves as easily in the salons as he does on the putting greens. No pro was ever given a bigger voice in helping to shape club policy in all matters, and he has helped raise Congressional to an envied eminence.

He tutors the club's duffers and par-shooters with equal grace, and no club membership gets better golf lessons than Cox gives. And that's no wonder, too, because there was a period when Cox was the best golfer on the tournament circuit.

Wiffy wasn't quite born on a golf course. He missed by 100 yards on that natal day in Brooklyn where the Cox manse bordered the fourth hole at the Dyker Beach Club. But he was virtually teethed on a golf links, and that has been his life. Congressional, proud of its man with all the know-how, is letting him know how they feel about it.

NAVY'S FOOTBALL TEAM, thrice beaten already, qualifies for at least one superlative. It must be the bravest. On Saturday at Baltimore it takes on Notre Dame, no less. The Irish, idle last Saturday while Navy was being battered by Penn, move into the game with an extra week's rest moreover.

There has to be a profound admiration for Navy despite its sorry record on the gridiron. It persists in playing the best, in contrast to Army which pulled out of its series with Notre Dame, Michigan which wants no part of the Irish, and other schools that quake at the thought of taking on Frank Leahy's doughty lads from South Bend.

Navy's policy is a holdover from the Tom Hamilton regime. His successors as the Navy athletic boss are of Hamilton's philosophy that there's no chance of beating the big teams unless you schedule 'em. The Middies have been licked 17 times in the Notre Dame series that started in 1927, and on Saturday it stacks up as the eighteenth defeat. But if the Middies don't play as good football as Army and Michigan, neither do they scare as easily.

IF YOU'RE ASKING what's wrong with the Redskins, be no longer baffled. It was that dratted 5-4-2 defense, and everything from now on is going to be hunky because the Redskins are going into a 5-3-3. There is the bare possibility, of course, that it won't make any difference.

Some better football players would help, and so would some experienced coaches. Evidently t... players didn't think up that 5-4-2 defense all by themselves. It was somebody else's inspiration, like the move that detached Turk Edwards as line coach and assigned him to scouting duties. And apparently just about as bright.

As head coach of the Redskins, Edwards was in a bit deep, but there was no great complaint about the skill of his lines. For more years than any other man, Edwards was the finest tackle in the pro league, and his knowledge of line play was admittedly great. So the Redskins remove him from their line-coaching set-up.

OUT IN CHICAGO the announcement that Jack Onslow would be retained as manager of the White Sox was a complete victory for Onslow over Frank Lane, the club's general manager. Until Mrs. Grace Comiskey, chief owner of the club, stepped in with authority Onslow was getting a shabby sort of deal from the Chicago outfit.

Despite Onslow's two-year contract, Lane was hinting all over the league that Onslow wouldn't return to the Sox. The day before Mrs. Comiskey announced he would, Lane told Associated Press three men were being considered as 1950 manager, and Onslow's name was not among them. The Onslow-Lane feud had raged all season, and the general manager was apparently the winner until the showdown.

In Onslow's favor was the fact that he lifted the Sox into sixth place and his club drew 158,000 more fans at home than in 1948. Also in his favor was his friendship with young Charles Comiskey, who originally appointed him to the job. Comiskey was friendly, too, with Lane, and apparently had been won over to Lane's attitude toward Onslow until Momma looked at the attendance figures and decided the club hadn't done badly.

Terps Still Third in U.S.on Total Defense

Although N. C. State outgained Maryland last Saturday, the triumphant Terrapins maintained their ranking as third leading team in the country on total defense and moved up to second on rushing defense.

National Collegiate Athletic Bureau statistics released yesterday gave several good reasons Virginia is undefeated. The Cavaliers are ninth on rushing; 17th on total offense. In addition, they're sixth i punting, ninth in rushing defense and 17th in total defense.

Georgetown's a yard behind Army as leading pass defender in the East and has a better percentage.

Players of the Week

LANDON BANFIELD

Landon School

INTRODUCING Landon—Landon School, and Landon Banfield.

The school needs little introduction, but young Banfield requires some. Landon (the boy) is the quarterback on Landon's (the school's) football team. The 17-year-old senior weighs 160 and stands 6 feet.

Banfield's choice of plays and general inspiration led Landon to a 13-12 upset win over Friends, a team Landon has been unable to stop for the last four years, last week.

In addition to his signal calling chores, Landon scored the first touchdown on a 40-yard dash around right end. He also set up the second Landon tally with his passing.

His savage tackling keyed his team up to the same pace so that they all found themselves playing over their heads in order to keep up with him.

RAY FOX

McKinley Tech

SCORELESS in his first game, and averaging 16.5 points per game in the next four games.

That's a pretty good average for a boy who wasn't quite good enough to be a top end and so was converted into a fullback by his coach, Ed Solomon.

Ray Fox, an 18-year-old McKinley Tech senior with 176 pounds spread over a 6-foot frame, is the boy, and also The Washington Post's selection for the High player of the week.

Ray is the lad who is principally responsible for Tech being in a first place tie with Central in the northern section of the Interhigh league.

He went scoreless in Tech's opener, a 6-6 tie with Eastern, but since has broken loose for a touchdown every game. He scored four times against Bell, three against Coolidge, was held to only one against Hagerstown but last week romped to three against Roosevelt.

Last week against Roosevelt he scored twice in the opening quarter on runs of 20 and 3 yards and added another tally on a 16-yard gallop in the third period.

GW Warned Lafayette Is No Pushover

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

Scouting is getting to be an out-in-the-open, highly respectable practice in modern collegiate football.

Used to be that a scout was regarded as the lowest form of spy, who stooped to peeking around shady corners to snatch an advance view of opposing teams.

But all that has changed.

Last Saturday, G.W.'s varsity scouting emissary to Lafayette was treated like a hero. He was wined and dined, and given a special seat in the press box, where he could watch every move of G.W.'s Friday night Griffith Stadium opponent.

However, in Scout Tony Cavallo's case it wasn't so surprising. It would have been difficult for Lafayette to treat Tony like anybody but a hero.

Back in 1937, Tony fullbacked the Leopards to an undefeated season, and in 1940, he was backfield coach on another undefeated Leopard team. Lafayette wasn't picking on little fellows either. On its schedule were such "name" schools as Army, Navy, Penn, Yale and Virginia.

With all the special treatment last week though, Tony remained on an even keel and brought back a sobering report on Lafeyette's 1949 club.

"It may not be as good as some of the clubs I played with, but don't let that 1-3 record fool you. Two of its present-day backs, Quarterback Frank Dowling and Fullback Gordon Fleming can make any team in the Nation."

Georgetown Prep Shifts 2 Games To Alexandria

The high schools are following the lead of the colleges and moving some of their big games across the river to the big George Washington High Stadium

Quantico and V. P. I. opened the season there and now Georgetown Prep is shifting its two Catholic High league games there. The Little Hoyas will face St. John's there, the night of November 6.

Then, on November 18, the Prepmen will entertain Gonzaga at 8 p.m. in a benefit game for the Alexandria Police Boys Club

Coach Rowland Picks Winners For This Week

COACH BO ROWLAND of George Washington took a gander at the performance chart on his desk yesterday and then carefully scribbled his selections for The Washington Post's weekly Pick-the-Winners football contest.

Winners this week, according to Rowland, will be: Notre Dame over Navy, Maryland over South Carolina, Georgetown over Fordham, Georgia Tech over Duke, Dartmouth over Yale, Michigan over Illinois, Penn over Pitt, Baylor over TCU, Virginia over West Virginia, Missouri over Nebraska, California over UCLA, North Carolina over Tennessee, Northwestern over Ohio State, LSU over Mississippi, Iowa over Oregon, Harvard over Holy Cross, Stanford over Santa Clara, Minnesota over Purdue, Southern California over Washington, and Alabama over Georgia. He predicts that Texas will nose out SMU, 21-20.

Redskins Go To Court Today

In the midst of all their troubles, the Washington Redskins go into Motions Court 11:30 a. m. today to fight a Richmond Rebels' petition for a permanent injunction against their playing Center Joel Williams.

The Redskins signed him to a year's contract last week and the Rebels screamed the Redskins had "stolen" their star. A temporary injunction was granted that enabled Richmond to take back Williams for their 28-7 victory over Wilkes-Barre in an American League game last Sunday.

Wiffy Cox Feted Today

Wiffy Cox, Congressional Country Club pro, is being given a busman's holiday by his club members on the occasion of his fifty-second birthday today.

Wiffy will play a round of golf today with Freddie McLeod, Columbia Country Club pro, Lew Worsham, former National Open champ and a Cox protege, and Jack Burke, Metropolitan District Amateur champ and one of the Nation's top amateurs. Wiffy thus becomes one of the big attractions at his own birthday celebration.

The big guy with the quick smile and ready wit will be the guest of honor at a celebration in the evening at the club. He insisted that his assistants, Jocko Miller and Warner Gary, share in any presentations before consenting to the idea of the party.

Chandler Awards Billy Southworth Full Series Share

Versailles, Ky., Oct. 26 (U.P.). Baseball Commissioner A. B. Chandler said here today that the Boston Braves voted Manager Billy Southworth only a half share of their portion of World Series receipts, but that he awarded Southworth a full share.

"Those divisions by the players are sent to the commissioner's office so he can see that no injustice is done," Chandler said, "and that's what I did."

The commissioner said he had no further comment on the matter, except that, "my action speaks for my feelings." On August 16 Southworth took a leave of absence and turned the club over to Johnny Cooney.

Williamson Picks Three Local Clubs

By Paul D. Williamson

Notre Dame's wonder boys, after a weekend off, take on Navy Saturday in a game that ought to provide another fairly easy win for the Fighting Irish.

Explanation: Team in left column is picked by the Williamson system as the winner. It is the home team unless its opponent in right column is starred.

Calumet Ace Turns Fast 6 Furlongs

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Pimlico, Md., Oct. 26.—Calumet Farm's Coaltown and Greentree Stable's Capot, due to clash in Friday's Pimlico Special, were on the track this morning.

Coaltown did the more serious work, being sent six furlongs over the sloppy strip while Capot's outing consisted only of galloping around the track under the watchful eye of Trainer J. M. Gaver.

The rivals appeared to be fit and ready for the winner-take-all-test of a mile and three sixteenths.

Coaltown, despite the off-track, was clocked in 23 2/5 for the quarter, :47 2/5 for the half and 1:13 1/5 for the six furlongs. The Calumet hope put this trial on top of his mile workout last Sunday in 1:37 1/5.

Coaltown during the summer set a new world's record for a mile at Washington Park when he carried 130 pounds and sped the eight furlongs in 1:34.

Previously he had equaled two world's records at Hialeah and Gulfstream Park. He ran a mile and an eighth in 1:47 3/5 at Hialeah under 114 pounds and at Gulfstream was clocked in 1:59 4/5 for a mile a quarter under 128 pounds.

In addition the Calumet ace set a track record of 1:09 3/5 for six furlongs at Hialeah and 1:49 1/5 for a mile and a furlong at Keeneland.

Other side of the story is Capot's Pimlico mark. He set a mile and a sixteenth track record of 1:42 3/5 in his first appearance over the Pimlico course as a 2-year-old, although disqualified and placed second. Then he came back a week later to account for the Pimlico Futurity.

In his only start over the local track this season, Capot was returned victor in the Preakness. He turned tables on Ponder, winner of the Derby in which Capot finished second.

Immediate Pay Raises In Doubt for 10,000 FHA, RFC Employes

Immediate pay raises under the new classified bill are in doubt for more than 10,000 employes in the Federal Housing Administration and the Reconstruction Finance Corp.

Legal eagles in both agencies believe the agencies themselves have the power to adjust salaries along the lines of the bill. Other officials aren't so sure.

Involved in the dispute is whether the bill will supersede the laws which gave both FHA and RFC authority to fix salaries of employes.

This much is clear: the classification bill brings RFC and FHA jobs under the classified system for the first time. But in addition, Civil Service is given up to six months to convert these jobs to classified pay scales. The question is whether the pay increase can be made effective for RFC and FHA employes Sunday, the date it's slated to become law, or if these agencies must wait until their jobs are classified and approved by Civil Service.

Both agencies have been following the classified act scales. Their attorneys believe the agencies retain power to fix salaries until the employes are placed under the classified system, so it appears something will be worked out for them.

DEADLINE: The President has until November 1, next Tuesday, to act on both the classified and postal pay bills. Insiders expect him to sign today or tomorrow.

The classified bill isn't a problem. In signing it, the President is likely to issue a statement to commend Congress for doing a good job in reclassifying the salaries of 885,000 employes.

The postal bill has caused the head-scratching. Several advisors would like to see the President kill it and issue a statement urging Congress to undertake a reclassification of postal salary rates early next year. Administration spokesmen suggested such a course in opposing the bill during congressional hearings. Nevertheless, it's a good bet the President will allow the bill to become law.

VA:- The pay raise act for the 17,000 doctors, dentists and nurses in Veterans' Administration hospitals won't get their pay raise until December 1.

All other pay bills voted by Congress are effective the first pay period following enactment into law. The VA law goes into effect the first day of the second month following enactment, which is December 1.

ARMY & NAVY: Salaries of their civilian doctors, dentists and nurses will continue under the classification act. At the last moment Senate-House conferees on the military appropriation bill struck out a rider to allow the Army and Navy to use the VA wage scale in fixing salaries of civilian doctors, dentists and nurses. The rider was agreed to by the conferees on several prior occasions and it was carried in their first conference report.

The Administration, however, is reported to have objected to the rider. The President sent a special message to Congress to recommend that VA's doctors, dentists and nurses be placed under the classification act, but the conferees on the pay-reclassification bill ignored it.

NOTES: William R. McComb, Wage & Hour administrator, was boosted from $10,000 to $15,000 yesterday when the President signed the minimum wage bill into law . . . Donald Stone and Clinton Golden, top staff members of the Economic Cooperation Administration, will explain the role of unions in ECA at a meeting today with members of CIO's Government Workers Union . . . Carl Berger, a GAO employe, is celebrating his twelfth year on radio as a Government news reporter. He conducts Your Government & Mine over WWDC.

CONSTRUCTIVE: The Citizens Committee for the Hoover Report is anxious to hear of steps taken by Federal agencies that have resulted in better organization, economy and efficiency. The committee plans to publicize such efforts and encourage other agencies to follow suit. Its national headquarters is located at 1421 Chestnut st., Philadelphia 2, Pa. Johnson is chairman.

Green Light Expected for Sesqui Unit

Vote Anticipated Today Which Will Permit Commission Taking Fair Site

The National Capital Park and Planning Commission is expected today to issue the final go-ahead signal for the Sesqui Commission to take over its proposed Freedom Fair site at the foot of E. Capitol st.

The opening session of NCPPC's monthly meeting yesterday heard Carter T. Barron, vice chairman of the Sesqui Commission, and executive director Edward Boykin outline plans for constructing Freedom Fair buildings at the E. Capitol st. site in Anacostia Park.

"Too Late"

Last night William W. Wurster, NCPPC chairman, told reporters that Barron informed his group that it was "too late" to consider alternate sites for next year's celebration. "The Sesqui presentation was one of the most clear and forceful ever brought before our commission," he said.

The required NCPPC vote on the Sesqui plan was delayed until today, it was explained, because the planning commission wants to make certain that the Freedom Fair buildings will not conflict with a proposal to build a new Anacostia Bridge in line with E. Capitol st.

At today's morning's session, District Highway officials will meet with NCPPC to discuss the Anacostia Bridge location issue.

NCPPC has previously plugged for an alternate bridge site at Massachusetts ave., se.

Yesterday afternoon members of the planning group visited the proposed site for the 5000-seat amphitheater in Rock Creek Park, near 16th st. nw. and Colorado ave. nw., where the Sesquicentennial symphonic drama will be presented.

Other Actions

In other actions, NCPPC

1. Approved transfer of two small land tracts from the Federal Government to the District near Whitehaven pkwy. to permit the widening of Foxhall rd. nw.

2. One Federal-to-District land transfer east and west of 13th st. se., to provide for the widening of Mississippi ave., and

3. Voted to oppose a recent Board of Zoning Adjustment ruling which had the effect of modifying present off-street parking regulations surrounding apartment buildings.

Today the planning commission also will consider the Commissioners' request to NCPPC to lift or modify its construction "freeze" order now in force in the Marshall Heights redevelopment area.

2 Marines Die as Result Of Traffic Accidents

Agriculture Dept. Economist Suffers Lung, Rib Injuries In Collision

Marine Pvt. David A. Elliott, 20, stationed at the Marine barracks at the Naval Gun Factory, died last night at Bethesda Naval Hospital, from injuries suffered in a traffic accident on October 16.

Dr. F. J. Broschart, Montgomery County medical examiner, said Private Elliott was riding a motorcycle on Route 15, near Emmitsburg, Md., when he was in collision with an automobile reportedly driven by Nicholas S. Schattland, Martinsville, Va.

Elliott sustained head injuries and multiple fractures. Dr. Broschart issued a certificate of accidental death.

Another Marine, Pvt. Sterlin Hall, 21, of the Quantico, Va., Marine base, died instantly late Friday night near Stafford, Va. Virginia State police said, when struck by a car as he was walking along the highway.

Four persons were injured and extensive vehicle damage done when an auto and a private school station wagon were in collision yesterday at 33d st. and Stephenson pl. nw. Four of five students in the station wagon escaped injury.

The station wagon belongs to the Honeywell Foundation, operator of a school at Bradley blvd. and Seven Locks rd., Bethesda, Md. It was driven by William R. Bennett, 21, of RFD 2, Good Hope rd., Silver Spring.

The auto was driven by Charles D. Jackson, 54, a Department of Agriculture economist, of 407 Rosemary la., Chevy Chase, Md. Riding with him were LeRoy A. Reynoldson, 63, of 6319 33d st. nw., and George P. Walton, 63, of 6318 33d st. nw., both Department of Agriculture employes.

Jackson was taken to Emergency Hospital suffering fractured right ribs and a collapsed lung. Hospital authorities said his condition is good. Treated for cuts and bruises at the hospital and released were Reynoldson, Walton and Peter Greenburg, 10, of 4700 Linnean ave. nw., one of the Honeywell students.

Police estimated damage to Jackson's car at $700 and to the station wagon at $500. After the collision, they said, Jackson's auto struck a light pole.

Officers summoned both drivers for a hearing on the accident in the corporation-counsel's office on November 7.

District Court Asks Reversal In Bond Case

The 12-member District Court has asked the Supreme Court to strike down a Court of Appeals decision involving a Washington bail bondsman.

The unusual petition was filed by Solicitor General Philip B. Perlman Tuesday on behalf of the District Court.

The case grew out of the District Court's revoking of the bonding authorization of John W. Carter. Carter, in filing his application in 1947, had answered "no" to a question as to whether he had ever "been charged and/or convicted of any offense involving moral turpitude."

The court later learned he had been charged with such offenses, although not convicted. The authorization was withdrawn a month after being granted. The court felt that if Carter had disclosed the charges, despite the fact of non-conviction, it would not have approved him as a bondsman.

Carter appealed to the Court of Appeals, however, which reversed the lower court. It did so without granting the lower court the right to appear, Perlman pointed out.

The Solicitor General argued that the matter of controlling bondsmen was the duty of the District Court and added that he was "very doubtful whether the granting, denial, suspension or revocation of an application to become a bondsman is reviewable in any form by an appellate court."

When they arrived, no one was there, but the back door was jimmied. Lying beside it was a bag containing a crowbar, large screwdriver, sledgehammer, drift punches, a chisel and other smaller tools. Police are keeping them.

Postlude

Symphony Pays Homage To Kindler

By Paul Hume

Before an empty podium and with nothing on the conductor's music stand but a single baton, Howard Mitchell and the National Symphony Orchestra honored the name and memory of Hans Kindler last night.

The simple but dramatic tribute came immediately after the intermission. Mitchell, entering from backstage, laid down his baton and took up his cello. Together, he and the orchestra Kindler founded almost 20 years ago played Bach's "Come, Sweet Death" in the arrangement by Leopold Stokowski. It was eloquent remembrance of the man who formed and built Washington's permanent symphony orchestra.

The entire concert was one Kindler would have been proud to conduct. He himself had led all the music on the program. William Schuman, president of Juilliard Institute of Music, wrote the overture, titled "American Festival." Kindler and the National Symphony recorded this some years ago.

Elgar's Violin Concerto was played here formerly by Albert Spalding, under Kindler. Last night's soloist was Yehudi Menuhin. The symphony was the seventh of Beethoven, a work Kindler was fond of playing.

The symphony was the evening's chief glory. The problem in Beethoven today is that so few conductors are willing to play his music as he wrote it. They always want to introduce their own ideas of tempos, dynamic changes, and orchestral balance. Beethoven, according to most authorities, was a master of all of these matters.

Last night he was proven right. Mitchell played the score with constant clarity. He built the allegretto movement in one single procession of approaching and departing. The scherzo was firmly held in dazzling time with the middle portions moving wonderfully.

The finale brought proper cheers and applause from the audience which had been lulled by earlier beauties. It was a great performance of Beethoven which means Beethoven was elevated to his rightful position.

The Elgar concerto is full of beautiful moments. Of these soloist and orchestral receive ample share. Menuhin has played the work for nearly two decades, often under the composer's direction. He understands its lyrical qualities and keeps it moving in spite of its tendencies to bog down.

Yet today it seems a bit overripe. Orchestral color is wonderful but can be laid on too thickly. Elgar used no restraint. This profits the background but slows down the total effect. Menuhin's tone was like velvet. His vibrato is more in evidence than it used to be and sometimes hindered his phrasing. He won an ovation rare in view of the quiet nature of the work. In this Mitchell and the orchestra shared as they deserved.

Schuman's overture, immature in view of his recent writing, is a good rousing piece. In this, as in the entire concert, the orchestra sounded rich and ready for what promises to be a great season.

Next Wednesday: Moiseiwitch in Beethoven's Emperor, and the Shostakovich Sixth.

Restraining Order Won by Clark Tenant

A besieged tenant who turned legal guns back on an admiral's wife in his effort to keep his apartment despite her attempts to evict him, won a temporary restraining order in District Court yesterday.

He is Edward B. Dewey, identified in previous court actions as a great-nephew of Admiral George Dewey. The eviction-seeking landlady is Mrs. Shannon Clark, wife of Rear Admiral Joseph J. (Jocko) Clark, who commands the Navy's Fourth Carrier Division.

Mrs. Clark and her husband bought a four-story apartment building in the heart of Embassy Row, at 2500 Massachusetts ave. nw., nearly two years ago. They started action to evict tenants from apartments ranging up to 10 rooms. Dewey, whose father lives with him, is the sole remaining holdout.

The Clarks originally demanded the entire structure for their own occupancy, but later sold six of the eight apartments on a co-operative basis. In a suit to evict Dewey, the Municipal Court of Appeals found for Mrs. Clark, against him, but this case is on further appeal.

Meanwhile, Dewey brought suit against Mrs. Clark for a general injunction to prevent his being disturbed in occupancy of his 10-room apartment, for $200,000 punitive damages and $5000 compensatory damages.

Yesterday, Judge Henry A. Schweinhaut granted the temporary restraining order to prevent Mrs. Clark from "accosting, molesting or interfering in any way with free ingress or egress of guests and visitors to the Dewey apartment." It also forbids her to enter the Dewey apartment without permission.

Dewey's action charged that she has in effect carried on a campaign of attrition to get him out, that he has been deprived of elevator service, mailbox facilities, and gas. It asserted she abused his visitors who came to give him and his father medical and nursing service.

She told a reporter that the Deweys would not admit a plumber, that she wants to occupy the suite herself, and that the Dewey action is "just an effort to embarrass my husband."

An earlier victim of Mrs. Clark's eviction drive was Huston Thompson, lawyer and one-time chairman of the Federal Trade Commission.

Ex-Salesman With Cancer Kills Himself

Jasper M. Beall, 72, a retired salesman, of 1510 Varnum st. nw., was found in his bed yesterday, a bullet wound in his head.

He was taken to Emergency Hospital where he died two hours later. Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald called the death a suicide.

His wife, Mrs. Mary L. Beall, said she heard a shot about 6:30 a. m., but did not know what it was. About an hour later, she discovered her husband wounded, a .25-caliber pistol by his side and a note nearby.

Mrs. Beall told police her husband had been suffering from a stomach cancer, and was to have undergone an operation next week. The note, according to police, said that he "couldn't keep going on."

She said that prior to his retirement in 1933, Mr. Beall was a salesman for a roofing and building materials corporation, and was a veteran of the Spanish-American War.

Besides his wife, he is survived by two brothers, Marvin E. Beall, of Oakland City, Ind., and John W. Beall of Washington. Graveside funeral services wil be held at 3 p. m., Friday, at Arlington Cemetery.

The MacArthur Boulevard Citizens' Association increased its active membership from 60 to 600 persons in a one-month drive, it was announced last night at a special meeting in the Palisade Field House, Dana and Sherrier pls. nw.

Members heard of the tenfold increase during a discussion of immediate and long-range needs of the community as a result of completion of the Whitehurst Freeway.

16th St.-Highlands Favors Trolley Music

A resolution adopted at a meeting in the Brightwood School, 13th and Nichols sts. nw., will be sent to the Public Utilities Commission.

The association also voted to request the District Commissioners for a 15-cent reduction in real estate taxes in view of the District sales tax, and to ask the School and Recreation Boards to develop the Luzon Playground at 14th and Van Buren sts., furnishing supervision for play after school hours.

The group reelected its present officers, as follows: Harry M. Dengler, president; Gorman Prince, vice president; Mrs. Edith L. Todd, secretary; Russell G. Merryman, treasurer, and Geary W. Lewis and Joseph N. Todd, delegates to the Federation of Citizens Associations.

River Terrace Group Elects J. F. Peter

The River Terrace Citizens Association last night elected Joseph F. St. Peter, president, and Frank Frazer, sr., delegates to the Federation of Citizens Associations.

The group authorized circulation of petitions among residents of Clay pl., Clay st., 34th st. and Dix st. ne., preliminary to a request for releveling of those thoroughfares.

Sam Crawitz was named chairman of a membership drive to begin next month. The association raised its dues from $1 to $2 per year.

Officials Fete Civic Leader For His Work

Commissioner John Russell Young, Municipal Court Judge Armond W. Scott and other civic officials last night joined the Lincoln Civic Association in honoring its president, Dr. Edward F. Harris, for his 35 years of civic activities.

Dr. Harris, a pharmacist, has been president of the Lincoln Civic Association for 14 years. He was feted at a dinner at Union Wesley AME Zion Church, 23d and L sts. nw.

Commissioner Young, an honorary member of the Association, said of Dr. Harris: "I wish we had more citizens like him. I think you are fortunate in having a man like Dr. Harris out working for you all the time."

Judge Scott, an old friend, said: "Ed Harris has been fighting all his days so you and I might have a better life."

Speaking of Dr. Harris' fight against segregation and of a case pending before the Supreme Court, Judge Scott commented. "He is about to live to see the fruits of his labors."

Others Also Speak

Speaking also in praise of the association president were Harry S. Wender, chairman of the District Recreation Board; Dr. C. Herbert Marshall, president of the Rock Creek Civic Association and of the National Medical Association; E. F. Harper, president of the Federation of Civic Associations; Woolsey W. Hall, past president of the federation; and Dr. Harold A. Haynes, a District of Columbia school official.

Dr. Harris was presented with a $25 savings bond. Mrs. Edna West Payton, principal of Francis Junior High School, presided.

2 Civil War Guns Stolen From Veterans' Home

Two muzzle-loading muskets, with brass powder chambers, vintage of the Civil War and still the property of Uncle Sam, were stolen in the past month, according to a report to police, yesterday.

Donald J. Stevens, assistant superintendent of the Temporary Home for Former Soldiers and Sailors, at 921 Pennsylvania ave. se., reported the loss. He said that in cleaning up the building, which once was a Civil War hospital, a month ago, he discovered seven of the guns. Five of them, he took to his office and cleaned up, but two were left in a room above a garage. Yesterday he discovered they had been taken.

Freed in Numbers Case

Low-Cut Dress Reveals Icepick; Bond Set at $500

Carrying an icepick in your bosom is dangerous business in more ways than one.

Mrs. Jonell Williams, 29, of 55 K st. ne., was convicted yesterday in Municipal Court of doing just that and bond was set at $500 during a presentence probation office report.

Police testified they arrested Mrs. Williams after noticing, just by chance, that the weapon was protruding a wee bit out of her low-cut dress Tuesday.

Arnold Union Vows To Work for State

By Zoning Board

Parking Lot Application Is Allowed

Use of a lot at 2017 F st. nw. for a 70-car parking lot was approved yesterday by the District Board of Zoning Adjustment.

The board qualified its approval of E. C. Ernst's appeal by granting permission only for a one-year trial period, and by stipulating that it be closed at night and that cars enter and leave on F st. rather than on an alley to the rear as requested.

Several residents in the area objected on the grounds it would cause congestion, noise and depreciation to property. Among them was John Letterman, who said he was speaking for his parents, Police Inspector and Mrs. Oscar J. Letterman.

Maj. Gen. U. S. Grant 3d, speaking for George Washington University, told the board there was a great need of parking space in the neighborhood.

The board granted 15 requests and denied four. Appeals were denied to Joan E. Davis and Robert M. Eggleston, for a school for retarded children at 1214 Madison st., nw.; Charles T. Hopkins, for a second-story addition and enclosing a porch at 4705 Kane pl., ne.; Sol Vinnick, for use of upper floors at 819-821 9th st., nw. as a warehouse; John P. Murchison, jr., for a nursery school at 3118 16th st., ne.

Richmond Harris was authorized to convert a house at 1529 33d st. nw., into two single-family homes—but no more. Neighbors appeared in protest in the belief Harris intended to divide the building into small apartments.

Union employes of the Washington, Virginia and Maryland Coach Co. (Arnold Lines) told Gov. William M. Tuck in Richmond yesterday they will work for the State if they strike as scheduled on November 2.

Thus, Arnold employes who have threatened to strike unless pay raises recently awarded by an arbitration board are forthcoming, would work on the same basis as those of the Alexandria, Barcroft and Washington (AB&W) line. The State has run AB&W since July 21.

Complaint Pending

Officials of the AFL Amalgamated Association of Street, Electric Railway and Motor Coach Employes of America, representing Arnold workers, notified Governor Tuck of union members' willingness to work for the State under Virginia's public utility law.

They advised him they believe Arnold Lines' operations are primarily interstate and that Virginia law does not apply. But, they made it plain, union members have agreed to work for the State if it takes over in event of a strike.

AB&W employes have a complaint pending before the Interstate Commerce Commission challenging the constitutionality of the law, which permits the Virginia Corporation Commission to take charge of struck utilities.

The AB&W buses serve about 75,000 passengers daily, chiefly between Washington and nearby Virginia. Arnold buses serve about 50,000 passengers between Virginia and the District, as well as between points in Fairfax and Arlington Counties.

Meanwhile, the executive secretary of Fairfax County, R. M. Loughborough, answered a query from Governor Tuck in this way:

"I am of the belief that they (the County Board of Supervisors) feel that the continued operation of the Washington, Virginia and Maryland Coach Co. is essential to the welfare of the people of Fairfax County."

Loughborough wired his statement in behalf of the supervisors, who were out of the county when a request for their opinion came from Tuck.

Gen. Boutwell Dies at Guard Conference

Montgomery, Ala., Oct. 26 (U.P.).—Brig. Gen. Louis E. Boutwell, 57, of Malden, Mass., died of a heart attack in his hotel room today, according to W. W. Wilkerson, hotel physician.

Wilkerson said Boutwell apparently died in his sleep.

Boutwell, sheriff of Middlesex County, Mass., was attending the 71st National Guard Association conference here. He addressed the group Monday afternoon, as chairman of the special air advisory committee of the group.

A graduate of Harvard law school, Boutwell served in the Air Corps during World War I and in the 101st National Guard from 1920 until 1940. He was an officer in the 26th Observation Squadron, attached to the 26th division—the Yankee Division.

Boutwell was placed in charge of antisubmarine patrol along the eastern seaboard immediately after Pearl Harbor and later won several decorations while serving as a colonel in the China-Burma-India theater during the war.

A leading exponent of the use of radar, Boutwell had been serving as commanding general of the 67th fighter wing, Air National Guard, in the New England States.

County School Discrimination Suit Studied

A suit charging discrimination by the Arlington County School Board in providing educational facilities for three Negro children was taken under advisement yesterday by Federal Judge Albert V. Bryan in Alexandria.

Counsel for both sides made final statements on the seventh day of the trial.

The board, and Superintendent William A. Early, codefendants in a suit brought by Constance Carter, Julius Brevard and Peggy Council, through their attorney, Lawrence W. Douglas, denied any discrimination.

Cites Justice Dept. Brief

Leon Ransom, an attorney for the plaintiffs, argued that "segregation means necessarily there must be discrimination." He asked Judge Bryan to take judicial notice that the Justice Department filed a brief with the Supreme Court earlier this month condemning the doctrine of separate but equal facilities as a "constitutional anachronism which no longer deserves a place in our law." The Supreme Court brief was filed in a suit by Elmer Henderson, charging he was unable to obtain a meal on a Southern Railway train in 1942.

Ransom said the Virginia State law directing segregation in schools "must bow to the Constitution of the United States" in guaranteeing equal rights for Negroes. He said the net result of the testimony was that Negroes were "placed in one category because of race" and were given lesser educational opportunities than white pupils.

He cited defense arguments that it would be expensive to provide the identical facilities and courses for Negroes now available at the white high school, and added: "Admittedly, it would cost too much. That is the price that must be paid by those who desire to maintain a system of segregation based on prejudice."

Douglas, former Commonwealth's attorney for Arlington, said the school officials were faced with a "fixed principle—segregation" and were obligated to operate equal facilities within that framework.

He argued that "equality is not identity" and since the Hoffman-Boston School for Negroes and the Washington-Lee High School for white students differed greatly in size, "it is perfectly obvious there cannot be identity."

Sees Some Advantages

Douglas said that in some respects the larger school was better than the smaller, but, on the other hand, the Hoffman-Boston School, with an enrollment last year of 48, had advantages over Washington-Lee with a student body of 1800.

The defense attorney challenged the claims presented by the three plaintiffs, pointing out that all were transfer students from Washington. He questioned by implication the sincerity of requests by the trio for courses not given at Hoffman-Boston, but on the Washington-Lee curriculum.

He emphasized that if the plaintiffs were admitted to Washington-Lee, they could not receive any course not now offered, unless a minimum of 18 students applied.

The final argument was made by Spottswood W. Robinson 3d, attorney for the plaintiffs, who declared that facilities at the Manassas Regional High School, where Negro pupils are sent for courses not available at Hoffman-Boston, were below Washington-Lee standards, removed pupils from extracurricular activities, and required them to travel distances of 28 to 30 miles daily.

He said the Arlington School Board, since it had only a contractual relationship with the Manassas institution, did not give Arlington students there the supervision the responsibility required.

Judge Bryan said he planned to visit the Manassas school before deciding the case, and also may make additional trips to the two Arlington schools.

Dr. Reuben T. Shaw

Philadelphia, Oct. 26 (AP).—Dr. Reuben T. Shaw, former president of the National Education Association, is dead at 65.

He died unexpectedly yesterday in the Board of Education Building, where he had been assigned temporarily as coordinator of science courses for the Philadelphia school system.

Dr. Shaw led a movement in the NEA from 1934 to 1937 that led to 18 revisions in its charter. He was elected NEA president in 1938.

A teacher in Philadelphia for 40 years, he was one of the originators of a State-wide school employes' retirement system adopted by the Pennsylvania Legislature in 1925.

He was widely known as a mountain climber and led expeditions to some of America's highest peaks.

He lived in nearby Media. His wife and three sons survive.

Hurban Dies; Former Czech Envoy Here

Prague, Oct. 26 (AP).—Vladimir Hurban, 66, former Czech ambassador to the United States, died today at his home here, friends of the family said.

The official Czechoslovak press agency said Hurban died after a long illness.

Col. Vladimir S. Hurban represented Czechoslovakia in Washington from 1936 to 1943 as Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary and from then to 1946 as Ambassador to the United States.

He gained worldwide fame for his defiance of a conquering Nazi army in refusing in March, 1939, when his nation was occupied by Hitler's troops, to give up the legation here.

"I will not hand over anything to the Germans," he informed Hans Thomsen, Charge d'Affaires of the German Embassy, on March 22, 1939, and this show of contempt for Hitler helped buoy up the flagging spirits of free men over the world.

Throughout the European war, he issued statements and made speeches here predicting the eventual downfall of the Nazis and the return of conquered nations to freedom. In March, 1941, he told reporters, "Czechoslovakia is a nation of 10 million Fifth Columnists working to undermine Hitler's New Order."

Hurban was an integral part of the Czechoslovakian Republic, assisting Dr. Thomas G. Masaryk in founding it after fighting Germans and Austrians in World War I. He accompanied Dr. Masaryk here for the signing of the Czech constitution. He was also a close friend of Dr. Eduard Benes, later President of the republic.

Steadfastly maintaining the legation at 2349 Massachusetts ave. nw. in spite of Nazi pressure for its surrender, he left America in July, 1946, to return to his native land to see the flag of the republic fly once more over Prague.

Born in Czechoslovakia on April 4, 1883, Hurban followed a 10-year experience as a journalist with a military and diplomatic career. When Hungarian police marked him as an agitator for some of his writings, he went to Russia, where he entered the service of the Russian general staff. When Czechoslovak units were organized under the leadership of Dr. Masaryk to throw off the Hapsburg yoke, he enlisted and rose to the rank of colonel.

Thus it was that he was with some 70,000 Czechoslovakian soldiers who found themselves on Russian soil following the 1917 Revolution and, forbidden to proceed directly to their homes, began their epochal march across Siberia to the Pacific.

Months later, Hurban joined Masaryk, here seeking aid in establishment of the new nation, and then stayed on as chief of a military mission to the United States From 1919 to 1924 he served as Military Attache at the Czechoslovakian Legation.

This was the start of a notable diplomatic career. For the next six years, he was Charge dAffaires in Cairo, Egypt, and then Minister to Norway, Lithuania and Sweden for another six-year period.

The slender, mustached diplomat spoke not only French and English, but also Russian, Polish, Serbian, Hungarian, German and Swedish.

His wife, the former Olga Boor of Landsford, Pa., was a childhood sweetheart whom he met in Czechoslovakia, when she visited there with her parents. They had no children.

The Czechoslovakian Embassy said yesterday it had not yet been informed of Colonel Hurban's death.

T. R. Gibson Dies; Formed Boys' Clubs

Thomas R. Gibson, 69, who helped take the neighborhood children off the street in Kenilworth, died yesterday at his home, 1541 Kenilworth ave. ne., after an illness of several years.

Until about 15 years ago, his chief avocation was getting the boys of his immediate neighborhood into uniforms — both baseball and football. He bought their uniforms and equipment, and organized them into the Kenilworth Athletic Association and the Century Athletic Club, and for years arranged their schedules with other teams.

But his sports activity was not limited to the organizing field. As a youth, he was nicknamed "Toady" for his underwater swimming ability. He played on numerous Washington sandlot football and baseball teams. His success was made despite a slight build and about 5 feet 6 inches of height.

For 35 years, he was with the American Express Co., and when he retired four years ago, was a claims agent.

The son of the late David and Sarah Rodier Gibson, he was born in Washington. He lived for 25 years at 1513 Olive st. ne.

Some of his sporting interest centered in birds. At Olive st., he kept more than 100 racing pigeons, and for years was a member of the East Potomac Racing Club. He also owned and trained a number of fighting cocks.

Mr. Gibson was a member of Kind David Masonic Lodge No. 28.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Helen Gibson; five sons, John R., of Newark, Del.; Thomas S., Richard V., David W., and Reid A. Gibson, all of Washington; two daughters, Mrs. Dora G. Thorn and Mrs. Helen M. Neff, both of Washington; four grandsons, and two great grandchildren.

Funeral services will be held 2 p. m. today in the Lee Funeral Home, 4th st. and Massachusetts ave. ne. Masonic burial services will take place at Fort Lincoln Cemetery.

Iran Embassy Marks Shah's Birthday

By Marie McNair and Elizabeth Maguire

THE RECEPTION at the Iran Embassy yesterday might well be called a dress rehearsal for the visit of His Imperial Majesty Mohammed Reza Shah Pahlavi next month.

The Iranian Ambassador, Hussein Ala, celebrated the birthday anniversary of his youthful ruler, a dark-haired, limpid-eyed young man, still under 30, who, it has been rumored, is looking for an American bride. In the absence of Madame Ala, who is at Cambridge, Mass., to visit her son, Freydoun, a student at Harvard, Mme. Nazerel Molk received with her son-in-law.

With many of the guests going on to dinner and the opening concert of the National Symphony, there were many long skirts trailing over the embassy threshold.

The Norwegian Ambassador and Mme. Morgenstierne, stopped in on their way to dinner, Madame Morgenstierne in black velvet covered with a white fox stole. The French Ambassador, Henri Bonnet, and Mme. Bonnet, in black with a white motif on her tiny black hat, were hurrying off to be hosts at dinner themselves, and the Netherlands Ambassador and Mme. van Kleffens were dining out later.

Dr. Stanley Hornbeck, our former Ambassador to the Netherlands, and Mrs. Hornbeck in a long gown with gold circles embroidered on her jacket, were to dine with Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Myron C. Cramer, who were entertaining in honor of Justice and Mrs. Tom Clark. Saw the good-looking Hurleys—Gen. Patrick J., and Mrs. Hurley in a deep bright blue frock, a hat to match and the newest of all furs—blue dyed mole.

THERE was the Ecuador Ambassador, Augusto Dillon, without his Senora; Mme. Bruggmann, wife of the Swiss Minister, without her husband; and the Luxembourg Minister, Hugues LeGallais, but I didn't see Mme. Le Gallais. The Canadian Ambassador and Mrs. Hume Wrong were there; Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Gordon Young were in dinner clothes; the Mexican Ambassador and Senora de la Colina were late comers. And I caught a glimpse of the First Secretary of the Australian Embassy, Owen Davis, and fresh cheeked Mrs. Davis; Mrs. Wilbur J. Carr, and the Ceylon Ambassador and Mme. Corea in a gay red sari banded in gold.

There was a new portrait of the Shah to make a focal point in the drawing room and guests needed no urging to find their way to the buffet in the dining room. Special Persian dishes—rice pilaf with a rare sauce, a curried meat dish, rare roast beef, ham and molded pate de foie gras stretched in tempting array the length of the room. Gathered around I saw the former French Premier and Mme. Chautemps, the latter in black with tiny red ball fringe on her hat; Mr. and Mrs. Lorenzo Martin, Mrs. Brien McMahon, the pleasant Ray Muirs—he's Assistant Chief of Protocol; the Venezuelan Ambassador and Senora de Pocaterra chatting with Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Whittemore; Baroness von Schoen in a long gown was hoping to get to the symphony, and among others there were Mme. El-Khouri, wife of the Syrian Minister; Mrs. McCeney Werli and her son, Bob; Mr. and Mrs. Henry Suydam, here for a visit to Mrs. Suydam's mother, Mrs. George Barnett; Mr. and Mrs. Lothrop Stoddard, and Representative Dewey Short, who's sailing on Saturday to join Mrs. Short in Switzerland and bring her home late next month.

Box Holders A-Glitter

WASHINGTON had its own "diamond horseshoe" at Constitution Hall last night for the opening of the National Symphony Orchestra's Wednesday evening concert series.

Boxes were filled with diplomats and dowagers and lovely ladies in glittering gowns. There were dinner parties beforehand and a large group went on after the concert to the 1925 F Street Club for Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Cox's reception honoring Howard Mitchell, the symphony's new conductor, and Yehudi Menuhin, famed violinist, who appeared as soloist with the orchestra.

The dean of the Diplomatic Corps, Norwegian Ambassador Wilhelm Munthe de Morgenstierne, and Mme. Morgenstierne, and Mrs. Harold Walker, were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Morris Cafritz, at dinner and in their box for the concert. The Undersecretary of Commerce and Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt Whitney had taken two boxes, their guests including the Netherlands Ambassador and Mme. van Kleffens, the Luxembourg Minister and Mme. LeGallais, Col. and Mrs. Robert Guggenheim, Miss Jane Lingo and Ralph McBane.

Brides-Elect Honored

A MISCELLANEOUS shower and mother-daughter tea was given yesterday afternoon by Mrs. William H. Arnold, wife of General Arnold, and their daughters, Mrs. Parkman Clancy and Mrs. James H. Dallman. Schuyler.

WCTU Head Sees Early Return of Prohibition; District UDC Elects Mrs. Ada B. Holt President

By Genevieve Reynolds and Nicha Soure

MRS. D. LEIGH COLVIN, national president of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union yesterday predicted the early return of prohibition.

"I believe the time is coming shortly when prohibition is coming back," she told some 200 members of the District Group at an annual fall rally held at Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church." The liquor people think so, too. That's why they are spending one-half of their advertising budget talking against the return of prohibition. Their entire campaign is to ward it off."

According to Mrs. Colvin if the Nation could get rid of the liquor traffic an atomic war might be avoided. She said that without liquor officials' mind might be clear enough to make decisions that could avert wars.

To step up the temperance campaign, she called upon all WCTU members to launch community and city drives.

She also suggested that pastors be requested to preach more sermons on temperance, and that WCTU's hold services commemorating the seventy-fifth anniversary of the organization on November 18, 19 or 20. In addition she called for a greater distribution of literature "on the liquor business."

World Convention Set for England

MRS. COLVIN announced that the World's WCTU convention will be held June, 1950, in Hastings, England. "A special boat will transport the delegates and I can assure you there won't be much drinking if any," she promised.

During the afternoon session Dr. Edna F. Patterson, director of medical temperance, gave an illustrated talk on the effects of food on the body. "Perhaps science will find that infantile paralysis and cancer are deficiency diseases caused from a lack of needed nutritive elements," she said.

In Dr. Patterson's opinion diets are devitalized today by over refinement of foods.

Mrs. Edith M. Irvine-Rivera, president of the WCTU in Puerto Rico, said that the 55 Unions in that country had conducted a successful fight against the sale of marijuana cigarettes. She advocated more visual education programs for prohibition.

The Rev. Dr. Charles S. Longacre, who led the fight against liquor in Oklahoma, said that the State went dry because the "United Drys were really united." We attributed the loss of Kansas to the wets to lack of organization of the drys.

Others speaking during the all-day rally included Mrs. W. H. Tender, director of literature; Mrs. Bertie W. Farmer, director of Flower Mission and Relief; Mrs. Lillian R. Schaefer, director of Child Welfare; Mrs. Elizabeth R. Groves of Soldiers and Sailors welfare. Mrs. Amy V. Glossbrenner, District WCTU president presided.

Mrs. Holt Elected President

MRS. ADA B. HOLT was elected president of the District Division United Daughters of the Confederacy, at the annual convention in Confederate Memorial Hall yesterday.

Other officers are Mrs. Ernest W. Howard, first vice president; Miss Dorothy Louise Harney, recording secretary; Mrs. Berry R. Thompson, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Clause Gathgene, treasurer; Mrs. William B. Sinnatt, historian; Miss Kate Sexton, registrar; Mrs. Josephus Trimble, chaplain; Miss Katherine L. Farrell, custodian; Miss Marion Smith, auditor; Mrs. Livingston Vann, jr., recorder of crosses, and Mrs. Eliza Carpenter, delegate to the national convention.

The District Division raised $400 for the Mrs. Norman Randolph Relief Fund, for aiding descendants over 70 years old of Confederate veterans. The members also established an educational loan fund for the District of Columbia. The project for incorporating Stonewall Jackson in the New York Hall of Fame was indorsed by the membership.

The club women also reaffirmed their support of the proposed memorial to Gen. Robert E. Lee to be placed in Washington Cathedral.

The proposal was brought up at the last national convention and taken back by the delegates to their chapters for discussion. The proposal will be brought to a vote at the national convention in New Orleans next week.

Marriage Plans Were Going Nicely, Then Man's Sister Arrived to Stay With Him Indefinitely, Which Stops Savings and Cramps the Courtship

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am 21 and engaged to marry a fine young man. We have been serious for nearly a year and want to be married in a few months, provided we have enough security in sight.

We are very congenial, have many common interests and until recently everything was fine, but now Ed's sister has come from a distance to stay with him indefinitely. They are very close and he is glad to have her here, and I like her immensely and wouldn't want to hurt her feelings for anything, but the situation has me worried.

She depends on Ed for practically everything, including his companionship, so she is always with us and we have no time to privately discuss our future plans, etc., as I feel we should. And as she isn't able to meet her expenses, Ed has been helping her (which she seems to expect), and consequently he is saving nothing for our future now.

Girl Is Obliged to Woo Man Now

I DISLIKE possessiveness and never have been that way, but perhaps I am slipping now. Maybe I want too much, but I do miss the confidential talks and precious moments alone we used to have. Ed used to come to see me four or five times a week, but I seldom see him now unless I go there to see and be with both of them. Should I continue this way? Do you think Ed will notice and correct the situation eventually?

I know he loves me as much as ever, and he always speaks of "we" and "us,"—and perhaps I don't understand family ties very well, for I have no brothers or sisters, and Ed has several. But with things as they are, I don't know what to expect or how to cope. I want to get along well with his people, as I hope to be one of them some day, but as matters stand, is there much chance of it? Please advise me. S. C.

Seems Sister Aims to Block Marriage

DEAR S. C.: The picture you give of the sister's clinging demands on Ed, which he gladly meets, certainly indicates that you don't exaggerate when you say they are "very close." And since they are like that, she probably knew of his engagement before she blew in from a distance to stay indefinitely, because when family ties are strongly felt or fondly cherished relatives usually keep in touch by letter and hasten to communicate important developments.

So, starting with this reasonable inference and adding to it the drift of her behavior since she anchored here—a drift that has shunted you to the outskirts of Ed's daily routine—I should say there is evidence for thinking that she came on purpose to obstruct the marriage plans, by running interference until she could wean Ed off the notion entirely.

As to why she might do such a thing, maybe the family assigned her to the mission, either on the theory that Ed is too young to know his own mind, make a right choice, burden himself with a wife, etc., or that he still has obligations to "his own" if he has funds to spare. Or possibly Sis herself engineered the blockade-visit, due to compulsive jealousy of any girl who seemed (from her angle) to be stealing her brother.

Ask Man to Face What's Going On

YOU SAY she leans on Ed's help and seems to expect it, because she isn't able to meet her expenses. But if she is able to travel about, and affords her brother so much companionship that he leaves you on the sidelines since she arrived, it is hardly conceivable that she couldn't earn her keep somewhere, if she really wanted to or faced a need to. So I don't feel there is valid excuse for her current sponging; and coming at this time, it seems like a calculated maneuver to elbow you out.

Moreover, though Ed might be innocently blinded to his offhand neglect of you nowadays, any woman close to him would readily discern your awkward plight, and if she wished to befriend the engagement she would find ways and means to give you the advantage of precious moments alone with him for confidential discourse. The fact that you get no lovers' privacy nowadays suggests that Sis is opposed to it.

Being an only child, doubtless you missed the emotional toughening commonly experienced by children in large families, who learn instinctively to stand up for themselves in contest with other children, and to fight one way or another for what they want; and in this respect you may lack understanding for coping with Ed's sister. But after all, he's a worthless prize if you'd be obliged to wrest him from a grudging family; so, as a test of his merit, asks him simply what's going on, what he foresees and what he intends. If he dodges the question, the answer is "don't count on him." M. H.

BLACK chiffon is used in this dinner dress with a vast skirt, designed by Jacques Fath for his American collection. It is one of the models that will be shown Friday afternoon at the Shoreham Hotel in a fashion show for the benefit of the Goodwill Guild

Saucily Sophisticated Jacques Fath Modes To Feature Benefit

By Peggy Preston

JACQUES FATH, the French designer who advocates shorter skirts for American women, will do his bit for a local charity this week. His American collection, made for Joseph Halpert, will go on the runway Friday at the Shoreham Hotel for the benefit of the Goodwill Guild.

Svelte, sophisticated, and at times saucy, the Fath clothes are causing a stir in fashion circles. Less elaborate than the designs of some of his rivals, his dresses and suits are nonetheless effective. Lines that are both simple and startling seem to find their way into most of his handiwork.

Have "Wearable Glamour"

MANY critics consider the Fath clothes to be the most wearable of all the French designs. On his recent visit to America the designer received the Neiman-Marcus award for his contributions in the field of fashion. In making the award Lawrence Marcus described the Fath costumes as having "wearable glamour." Such a combination, of course, endears them to the American woman who searches for glamour in everything from aprons to shoe buttons.

Fath's American group is less dramatic than his Paris collection for this season. It is the second which he has designed for the Halpert firm, and is considerably larger than last year's. Included are dinner and evening gowns, cocktail frocks and a great many classic wool dresses. Most of the skirts are pencil slim, with panels flying away at odd angles. But when he makes a full skirt he does so in earnest. It is generally huge, held out with layer after layer of stiffening. Novel collar detail is an interesitng factor in any Fath design and buttons, arranged in unexpected rows, are a great fancy of his this year.

Novelty fabrics, such as "blistered" taffeta, are used here and there throughout the collection. One especially outstanding dress is made of crisp silk and fashioned as a short dinner frock with strapless bodice. A bolero with long, tight sleeves and huge erect collar that stands away from the shoulders transforms it into a cocktail outfit.

To Feature Goodwill Tea

THE entire collection is being presented here by Julius Garfinckel & Co. It will be the feature attraction at the Goodwill Guild's first open meeting and tea of the season. The meeting will begin at 2:30 p. m., and the fashion show will get under way at 3. Tickets, priced at $2.50, may be had by calling Mrs. John G. Ladd at Emerson 3779. They may also be purchased at the door on the day of the event.

Honor guests at the event will include Mme. Bonnet, wife of the French Ambassador; Mrs. Corea, wife of the Celyonese Ambassador; Mme. Bruggmann, wife of the Swiss Minister; Mme. Munthe de Morgenstierne, wife of the Norwegian Ambassador, and Mme. Jutila, wife of the Finnish Minister.

Mrs. Fred Vinson heads the list of those who will preside at the tea table.

British Handwork on Display

If you missed the showing of British handmade sweaters and children's clothes at the United Nations Club a short time ago, you have a chance to catch up with it this week.

The exhibit went on display Monday at the office of the British Overseas Airways Corp. (opposite the Mayflower) and will be there all this week.

All articles in the exhibit were made in England by members of the British Women's Home Industries, and are exquisite examples of needlecraft. Garments may be ordered to measure. An added attraction, is that arrangements may be made on the spot to have your order flown from England, via Boac.

Gowns of Stuffy '70's Outvie 1949's Brightest Offerings; Battle Spares Gems of Art

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

CHATTER about the 1920 fashion revival continues apace wherever fair and not so fair ladies foregather. So far only the most modified versions have been spotted in fashionable haunts and the general attitude is thumbs down. To clinch contention of the '20s utter hideousity, we'd like to nominate as most fashionable and seductively becoming garments of the early season, two dinner dresses, 75 and 66 years old, respectively, worn and owned by Mrs. Blair Childs and Mrs. B. Lauriston Hardin, jr.

Mrs. Childs' lovely antique consists of a very full, ankle length in front, dipping in back, skirt of garnet red velvet. There are twin, inverted, unpressed pleats radiating from the waistline in back and the placket is fastened by a gigantic black hook. The skirt, belted in matching grosgrain, is topped by a long sleeved blouse of modern French lace dyed garnet.

The skirt was made in Paris about 75 years ago by Worth for Mrs. Childs' grandmother and was, she believes, part of her trousseau. It's lined with taffeta still absolutely intact and, on being removed from its tissue paper covers, needed no cleaning, merely a light steaming. Anyway it looks wonderful on petite Mrs. Childs, who wears it with a swish and quite an assortment of ruby-set diamond dog-collars, clips and so forth.

Mrs. Hardin's dress is of velvet so deeply purple it's almost black. It, too, belonged to her grandmother and was bought somewhere in the early eighties. Titian-haired Dorcas Hardin, who's become the "best dressmaker designer" in town, revamped the garment considerably, making a bateau neckline, sleeveless bodice out of the original model's fancy underskirt. The skirt bells simply and is a little shorter than ankle length. Though it's less dressy than Mrs. Childs' creation, she lightens the purple with gold clips and earrings.

Concealed Art

JOHN WALKER, curator of the National Gallery of Art, and Bancel La Farge of New York, were the first art connoisseurs to see the magnificent Habsburg collection after it had been captured by our troops from the Nazis. It was stored in a salt mine at Laufen in Upper Austria and reached only after walking through seemingly interminable twisting, dimly-lit corridors. An immediate inventory, however, disclosed that many of the smaller pictures (the Habsburgs had a failing for mammoth canvases), Velasquezes and Breugnels, the collection's most priceless treasures, were missing.

Two weeks before the war ended, Austrian guards told Walker and La Farge, machinegun-armed Germans had carted them off, insisting they would save the paintings from capture, hiding them in tanks if necessary. Apparently, the Nazis kept their word—for the pictures had vanished. Some time later, after painstaking inquiry, Johnny Walker picked up the trail in Salzburg. There a United States officer volunteered somewhat casually that some paintings had been captured in a battle with Storm Troopers. Three truckloads of them were parked in a warehouse outside the city. No one had had time to look at them!

Literally stumbling over bags of gold and other less sensational booty, Walker and La Farge found the paintings—frameless, unboxed, after being captured in an honest-to-goodness pitched battle! They couldn't have been more vulnerable—yet they were 100 per cent unharmed!

About Slipping Table Pad

The pad on my dining room table is constantly slipping. Is there any way to anchor it in place without marring the table, which is mahogany?
B. S.

Sew bands of elastic to the corners of the pad so that the elastic goes under the table corners and holds the pad snugly to the table. This same method is used on bridge table covers to hold them taut. To do this, use a short piece of ¼-inch wide white elastic and fasten the ends of it securely to the pad in two places directly opposite each other and about six inches from the corner. When you do this, place the pad on the table and pin the elastic in place so that the bands are the exact length necessary to hold the pad tightly. It will be easier if the table pad is exactly the size of the table top.

Can you tell me where I can have the rush seat of a Hitchcock chair replaced? A. H. K.

The Henry and Annie Hurt Home for the Blind at 3050 R st. nw., and the Columbia Polytechnic Institute for the Blind, Inc., at 1808 H st. nw., both have workshops in which the blind do cane work. Other firms which do the work are listed under "Furniture Refinishing and Repairing" in the yellow section of the phone book.

I have a friend who is collecting unusual feathers. I wish to purchase, as a gift for him, a case in which these can be mounted for display and preservation. Where can this be obtained? R. S.

I know of no place where a new case suitable for mounting feathers can be purchased. Such a case can be made to order by firms which specialize in preparing displays, but it would be quite expensive—$50 to $100 depending upon the size you wish. If you wish to discuss it further with a display firm, call some of the firms listed under "display service" in the yellow pages of the telephone book.

Here's another idea: Visit the feather displays at the National Museum, Constitution ave. at 10th st., to get an idea of what sort of case would be suitable for feathers. When you know just what is needed then visit second-hand furniture stores, looking for old shadow boxes, deep picture frames, etc., which would be suitable with refinishing and new lining. If you are handy at such things you should be able to do the refinishing job yourself.

Can you please find out who could make comforts out of featherbeds in this town?

A firm on Connecticut ave. will make comforts out of feather beds. You can reach them by calling Ordway 1812.

I have a boudoir chair covered in a chintz print with a white background. Can the soil be cleaned from the regions that get the most wear? I have been afraid to try anything since other upholstery cleaning I tried was unsuccessful. S. K.

It is very difficult to clean upholstery because when a cleaner is applied to the surface, unless great care is taken the soil is merely driven through the upholstery fabric to the padding underneath. When this happens it is virtually impossible to remove the soil, and with it so lodged the surface fabric doesn't ever look completely clean.

This would be particularly true with a smooth fabric such as chintz. Also, satisfactory results cannot be achieved by shampooing certain areas of the upholstery—the entire piece must be done.

The best suggestion I can make for cleaning soiled areas is to add carbon tetrachloride to corn meal to make the meal just damp and spread it over soiled areas, rubbing it in. Let stand until the meal is dry and brush away. Repeat if necessary. This method is usually more successful on fabric with a pile, but may improve the appearance of the chintz.

How can I keep bathroom tile floors (dark tile) shiny? After washing, they have a dull look.
W. D. J.

Apply a thin coat of paste wax to the tile, allow it to dry thoroughly and buff. It may take several applications to build up a heavy enough coat of wax to give a high shine. When waxed, tile floors should be washed only when absolutely necessary, for washing will remove the wax and a new coating must be built up. Between washing they can be cleaned by wiping with cleaning and polishing wax (so labeled.) This is a semi-liquid wax which will remove soil and leave a film of wax on the surface.

Do you or any of your readers have a recipe for fricassee chicken made with a wine sauce? There is a Swiss restaurant on 13th st. that serves this delicious dish in a casserole with vegetables. Also, I would like a recipe for a wine oil salad dressing. The one I am searching for has a slight garlic flavor, is almost colorless, and is quite thick. This particular salad dressing is served in a restaurant in Tulsa, Okla., which is quite famous for its salads.

Can any of our readers supply E. B. L. with these recipes?

I am writing for help for a friend who recently moved into a new home which is thickly infested with big black spiders and also good-sized brown spiders. The house is an old stone house which has been modernized. The spiders are all over the house, even crawling on the outdoor porch. I don't know what kind they are, only that one got on me but did not bite before I discovered it. Some of the black ones are so large that I'm sure their bodies alone would measure ⅜ inch diameter.
E. E. R.

Like bothersome household insects, spiders lay their eggs in cracks in woodwork, under loose edges of wall paper, and such dark protected places. To be permanently rid of them it is necessary to destroy the eggs as well as the spiders by spraying these spots with a 5 percent DDT oil solution. Also, webs should be destroyed as soon as they appear by using a vacuum sweeping attachment. In addition, each spider should be killed.

The DDT will not instantly kill the spiders but they should start to become less obvious in a few days and in a few weeks should be entirely gone. DDT, when sprayed on surfaces, dries and leaves crystals which are lethal to insects for several weeks. If the first spraying does not completely eliminate them, repeat in a few weeks.

I have a prayer book which needs to be rebound as the cover is becoming badly frayed. I wonder if you can tell me where this single article could be rebound. I also have a complete set of Mark Twain's novels which are bound in a cream colored binding. Since the set was purchased a number of years ago, it is badly in need of a good cleaning. There are crayon and pencil marks on a number of them and I wonder if you could tell me either how to clean them at home or of a place where this could be done for me.

I have recently purchased two very good sets of books for my son and wonder if you can suggest any coating of plastic or some of the other material that could be put on the covers to preserve them. D. M. W.

You can have your prayer book rebound by a firm on Pennsylvania ave. which specializes in this work. They can be reached by calling National 0113.

Going over the book with an art gum eraser will remove some of the soil. Or, go over them with mild soap on a soft, damp cloth. If this removes the soil, wipe with a cloth dampened in clear water to rinse and let dry thoroughly. When dry apply a colorless or cream wax to the surface to renew the finish and make them more resistant to soil.

If it isn't possible to get all of the marks off the covers by washing, you could cover up the stains by applying a plastic coating made especially for leather and imitation leathers. This comes in many colors including white and black. One paint store where it can be purchased can be reached by calling District 1130. An easy way to arrange the books to apply the coating is to hang them over a clothesline. This protective coating would also be ideal for your new books.

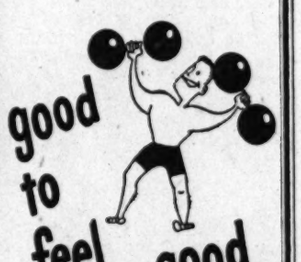
Winers and Diners Illustrate Tonight

Filet of Sole Marguery, Mouton Jardiniere, and Baba au Rhum will be on the menu tonight at the first meeting of the "Washington Winers and Diners" at Maxime's on Connecticut avenue.

The group has just been formed by nine Washington men, most of whom served in Paris with the State or other Government departments, and have a particular interest in fine foods. They plan to meet at various local restaurants in turn. Lieut. Col. Robert D. Heinl, USMC, will be toastmaster at tonight's dinner. A "wine-tasting," with Reisling and Meursault as the two wines, will be held at the apartment of Brandon Shea, secretary of the group, before the dinner.



Cooking Cues . . .

If there are juices left in the pan after baking a meat loaf, mix them with medium cream sauce and serve as a gravy. Season this gravy well with Worcestershire sauce, minced parsley, celery salt or finely grated onion.

For a luncheon salad, mix chopped hard-cooked egg with minced leftover ham and use sour cream for the dressing. Serve on salad greens or use as a filling for split toasted frankfurter rolls.

One on the Aisle—

A Maid's Shriek Is Starting Gun

By Richard L. Coe

"CHICAGO DEADLINE," at the Palace, is a watchable picture, being one of those crime yarns that gets more tangled with each incredulous gasp.

It also is one of those newspaper stories which makes a mere movie reviewer shudder at the thought of being switched to the police beat. Apparently the lives of such stalwarts of The Washington Post as Al Lewis, Jack Kearney, Jean Reiff, Paul Herron and their collaborators aren't worth a plug nickel.

True, Alan Ladd struggles out of this Tiffany Thayer yarn with nothing worse than a few slugs in his chest, a busted arm and as close to the shakes as ever his steely nerves have faltered, but, then, he's Ladd. Lesser mortals would have dropped in the first heat.

Alan we first see tidying up what looks to be an heiress who's run away from home (end of heiress—I think), when, in a room down the murky corridor of the cheap rooming house, a maid shrieks. She's found a young girl's body. It's not murder, just the extremities of T. B., but Alan pads into the room, filches a black address book and blandly sneers to the police he knows nothing about the lass.

Getting to work on the address book, Alan locates all sorts of people who say they know nothing of Rosita Jean D'Ur, which, gentle reader, is the name of the babe. She wasn't born to the classy handle, worked her way up via Texas and California in that shady Neverland beloved of Hollywood, that world where men are ruthless gamblers, thugs and swoon-kings and where All Roads Lead to Wrong.

"CHICAGO DEADLINE." Paramount release produced by Robert Fellows. Screen play by Warren Duff from a story by Tiffany Thayer. Music by Victor Young. Photographed by John F. Seitz. Directed by Lewis Allen. At the Palace.

THE CAST

Ed Adams	Alan Ladd
Rosita Jean D'Ur	Donna Reed
Leona	June Havoc
Belle Dorset	Irene Hervey
Tommy Ditman	Arthur Kennedy
Solly Wellman	Berry Kroeger
Anstruder	Harold Vermilyea
Blacky Franchot	Shepperd Strudwick
Paul Jean D'Ur	John Beal
Howard	Tom Powers
G. G. Temple	Gavin Muir
Pig	Dave Willock
Bat	Paul Lees

Just what Rosita had done except passed from paw to paw, receiving snazzy apartments in exchange for a mere smile, is not clear to me, but, like Dana Andrews and his "Laura," Alan's mad about the girl, wants to clear her name. This he does by reminding the panting public, through his woolly paper, that she existed and led a life of S-H-A-M-E.

June Havoc Is Welcome

He gets his first clew from Rosita's brother, played by the always admirable Arthur Kennedy. (Kennedy's ability to keep aloof from his inevitably sordid companions is getting to be Tradition.) Alan likes Kennedy, so he falls in love with his dead sister, at least I suppose. Anyway, a respectable banker commits suicide (or is murdered), the bell tolls for such mugs as Berry Kroeger, Harold Vermilyea and, of all people to be a thug, Shepperd Strudwick.

Along the way Alan also picks up one of those Tiffany Thayer girls, sharply played by June Havoc. June has almost as tough a time with the dead girl as Joan Fontaine had with Larry Olivier's first wife, Rebecca, winding up the proceedings by urging Alan,—at Rosita's funeral, to go back to his hospital bed. "If you won't do it for me," murmurs June through her eyelashes, "do it for her."

THE WASHINGTON World Affairs Center, which showed the Army's "Nuernburg—Lesson for Today" last night at the Interior Auditorium, announces that other film documentaries will be shown during the fall and winter seasons.

At Keith's

'She Wore a Yellow Ribbon' Is Rough, Warm and Human

By Orval Hopkins

THEY'RE hamstringing me. They seen me coming and they mousetrapped me. Two good movies in a row. A cops and robbers job and now "She Wore a Yellow Ribbon." Well, let's get on with it.

"SWAYR" is a high grade horse opera which opened yesterday at Keith's Theater. It's the story of how an aging cavalry captain, John Wayne, deftly avoids what might have turned into a long and costly Indian war, a war which, or so the narrator at Keith's said, might have had serious effects on the colonization of the West, perish forbid. Wayne roams through it as surefootedly as a mountain goat, laying out young lieutenants with the slick cracks of his tongue and rendering the women speechless with neat homilies.

They've cooled John off a little and I assume the responsibility for this worthy deed to lie with his friend, John Ford, who produced and directed this film. Wayne is every bit as tough as he was in "Red River" and "The Wake of the Red Witch," but he's a warmer, more human person here.

The picture introduces (at any rate, to me) four young people, three of whom I suspect of being either talented or well-directed—it's probably a happy combination of both. The three are John Agar, the young lieutenant who gets the girl, Harry Carey, jr., the y. l. who misses same, and Ben Johnson, a cavalry sergeant who rides like a horsefly and is gifted with wonderful sight ("I don't know where you got your brains," says Wayne, "but God sure gave you that pair of eyes."). Joanne Dru, the fourth youngster, is a pretty girl who doesn't do very well as an actress. Too arch for me. Wayne and I are sure getting old.

Victor McLaglen and Mildred Natwick are also in the movie and both are great assets. The former has a typical McLaglen sequence in which eight men try to arrest him in a bar. He handles them all with ease. It's the same old McLaglen, but somehow I can't deplore it. Miss Natwick has only a fairish amount to do, but she does it with a sure touch. George O'Brien is also in it, but it's not the same old George. Good thing, too.

The photography is done in Technicolor and is something sensational. The movie was filmed in the Monument Valley of Arizona. High rock after gigantic high rock, picked up as the cavalry troop slogs by, makes for spectacular effects. The yellows and blues of the uniforms, with the red shirts the Indians seem to have been affecting in those days, round it all into a pretty splashy number.

The high point of the picture, I guess, is when Wayne goes to call on an old Indian chief friend of his. He tells the chief the war, if begun, would be senseless. The chief agrees at once and suggests that they go off hunting and get drunk. Wayne declines and the chief admits he is powerless to sway the young braves, who want blood. Wayne goes away and that night stalls the entire project by simply running off the Indians' horses.

It's rough and warm and sometimes moving. Frank Nugent and Lawrence Stallings wrote the screenplay from a story by James Warner Bellah.

"SHE WORE A YELLOW RIBBON." RKO-Radio release produced by John Ford and Merian C. Cooper. Screen play by Frank Nugent and Laurence Stallings from a story by James Warner Bellah. Photographed in Technicolor by Winton Hoch. Music by Richard Hageman, arranged by Lucien Cailliet. Directed by Ford. At RKO-Keith's.

Women Voters Quiz Magruder On Bond Board

Proposed establishment of a State commission to advise localities on bond issues was defended yesterday by its sponsor, J. Maynard Magruder, Arlington Democratic member of the House of Delegates.

Magruder, who said last week he was preparing to establish such a body, was called on to answer criticisms at a luncheon of the Organized League of Women Voters. The group met in the Epiphany Church, Columbia Pike and S. Wayne st, to hear Magruder and two other House of Delegates candidates running in the coming election.

Mrs. W. H. Gammon, 4019 S. 18th st., Arlington, asked Magruder whether the commission, which would approve or disapprove all bond issues before submission to the voters, would not "interfere with local initiative."

She suggested the commission was part of a "tendency toward State control," and added: "Is it going to be politicians who are on the committee, or specialists?"

Magruder replied the plan, already in existence in North Carolina, "will increase local initiative and benefit the local treasury."

Communities could go ahead with a bond referendum, despite commission disapproval, he said. Moreover, he argued, the central agency would save localities money by marketing bonds free for the communities.

"It's a matter of conjecture who would be on the commission," he said, in reply to Mrs. Gammon's query.

I. Lee Potter, Republican, told the 30 persons present that "I have not exactly made up my mind (on the commission) but my thoughts run along with Mrs. Gammon's."

George Damm, incumbent Democrat, said he favored legislation permitting women to serve on juries, but would not make such service mandatory.

Potter, who earlier advocated permissive legislation for women on juries, said he had changed his stand this week and now favors making women liable for mandatory jury service.

Man Convicted Of Getting Drugs Fraudulently

Cecil A. Sogren, 45, was convicted yesterday in District Court of getting narcotics prescriptions by fraud.

Sogren, whose address was given as 623 Pennsylvania ave. se., used a fictitious name to get prescriptions for dolophine hydrochloride. It was the first prosecution here under a law giving the President power to designate certain synthetic drugs as narcotics.

According to Assistant United States Attorney Cecil Heflin, police apprehended Sogren after it was discovered that in applying for the prescriptions he gave three fictitious addresses. One was the location of a coal yard, another a church, and the third was nonexistent.

General to Retire After 45 Years In 3 Services

Maj. Gen. Hugh J. Knerr is retiring this month after 45 years of active duty during which he has served in the Navy, the Army and the Air Force.

It was the Air Force that yesterday announced his plans to quit at the end of this month.

The 62-year-old general, who has been serving as special assistant to the Air Force Chief of Staff, first retired in 1939, but was recalled in 1942 and has been on the job ever since.

Knerr was graduated from the Naval Academy in 1908. Later he transferred to the Army's Coast Artillery. He turned to aviation in 1917 and during the next seven years he had both engineering and flying assignments.

Also retiring October 31 is Brig. Gen. Michael G. Healy, air surgeon on the Continental Air Command. He is a graduate of Georgetown University.

Tennis Coach Convicted of Incest Charges

Los Angeles, Oct. 26 (AP).—Leslie Jahn, 41-year-old tennis coach, today was convicted on three counts of incest involving his 16-year-old daughter, Laura Lou Jahn, former national junior girls' tennis champion.

Jahn had denied his daughter's charges.

Judge William Byrne set Nov. 16 for probation hearing and sentence and permitted Jahn to remain at liberty on $2500 bail.

Mrs. Lucy Meska of San Francisco, the girl's mother, said Laura Lou complained 10 years ago that the father was molesting her.

Mrs. Meska said when she confronted Jahn with her daughter's story in 1939 he gave her a "terrible beating." She said she also told Jahn's parents about Laura Lou's complaint.

Truman Speaks Sunday On Church Broadcast

By the United Press

President Truman will make a radio speech Sunday night on a program dedicated to "Religion in American life."

The broadcast will be sponsored by the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America, the Synagogue Council of America and other church groups.

The program begins at 11:15 p. m. (EST) and Mr. Truman will speak at about 11:25 p. m.

Sen. Johnson, Rep. Hinshaw Hit AEC Probe

Two legislators yesterday threw the charge "politics" at the Joint Congressional Committee on Atomic Energy.

Both are members of the committee. One, Representative Carl Hinshaw (R., Calif.), made his complaint in a separate report on the summer-long investigations of the Atomic Energy Commission and its chairman, David E. Lilienthal.

Hinshaw referred to the majority report on the investigation, signed by all the Democratic members of the committee two weeks ago. He said it was colored by "political implications."

The second was Senator Edwin C. Johnson (D., Colo.), one of the majority signers. He said the whole congressional committee should resign at once unless it stopped playing politics with the atomic program.

Johnson was presumably alluding to the reports on the investigation where majority and minority split exactly on party lines.

Hinshaw said he could not sign the minority report of the rest of his Republican colleagues, or the majority report. He could not disagree with the findings of the latter, he said, because they did give proper credit to the AEC and at the same time indicated where criticism was warranted.

But, he said, the legitimate criticism of the AEC was buried under a "haystack of language" where only the "careful reader" could find it.

Hinshaw seemed also to make an implicit criticism of the minority, led by Senator Bourke B. Hickenlooper (R., Iowa), for the manner in which he leveled the charges against the AEC last summer.

Hinshaw said he regretted the "circumstances which compelled" the Democratic members to "rise and defend the AEC politically."

Senator Johnson apparently was unhappy both with the Republican attack and the Democratic defense in which he joined. He said:

"This summer, for the first time, partisan politics have cropped up in the (congressional) committee's work. It is all wrong. Unless it stops at once, the whole committee ought to resign and turn these vital problems over to worthier hands . . ."

Two Physicians Examine Thomas At Court's Order

By The Associated Press

By direction of a Federal Court, Representative J. Parnell Thomas (R., N. J.) was examined by two private physicians today to determine whether he is physically able to stand trial on November 7 on charges of conspiracy to defraud the Government.

His attorney, William H. Collins, said Thomas, former chairman of the House Committee on Un-American Activities, will return to his New Jersey home and no statement will be made until the physicians' report is presented to the court Friday.

Thomas spent several weeks at Walter Reed Hospital suffering from a stomach ailment. He has obtained trial delays on the claim he has been too ill to stand trial.

Thomas is charged with padding his office payroll and with taking "kickbacks" from pay of employes in his office.

Police, Gangsters Seeking Blonde In Death Race

London, (Thursday) Oct. 27 (U.P.). The Daily Mail reported today that Scotland Yard detectives are in a "race against death" to find a mysterious blonde before she is murdered by British gangsters because she knows too much.

The Daily Mail said the blonde knows the inside story of the murder of Stanley Setty, a used-car dealer whose headless and armless body was found in marshes last week about two weeks after he disappeared. The blonde, the newspaper said, is now trying to hide from the murderers.

It was understood that detectives working on the murder believe Setty's body may have been dumped from a plane.

7.9 Pct. Rent Increase For 185 Units Backed

A rent increase of 7.9 percent has been recommended by District Rent Control Examiner James G. Tyson on 185 apartments at 4801 Connecticut ave. nw. Rents, which now range from $50 to $120 a month, would range from $54 to $129.50 if the increase were granted. A 12 percent increase has been sought.

The recommendation may be appealed to the office of the Administrator of Rent by November 3.

Fleet to Visit Athens

Athens, Oct. 26 (AP).—Twenty-four United States vessels of the Sixth Task Fleet under command of Vice Admiral Forrest P. Sherman will pay Athens a visit in the next few days.

8 Convicts Flee Delaware Prison, 'Armed to Teeth'

Wilmington, Del., Oct. 26 (U.P.). Eight armed convicts, described by State police as "desperate," escaped from the New Castle County workhouse in suburban Greenbank tonight.

Police said the men were "armed to the teeth." The escape was made shortly before 7 p. m., but the convicts cut all telephone lines and police were not notified until nearly 40 minutes later.

The convicts apparently made their way by foot to Brookland Terrace, one mile from the prison, where they accosted James L. Elliott and forced him at gunpoint into his auto. He was thrown from the car one block from his home.

Warden Elwood Wilson and State police refused to disclose how the men made their escape or how they obtained weapons. It also was not known immediately whether any shooting took place during the break.

Doctors Tell Of Expulsion In Oregon Suit

Portland, Oreg., Oct. 26 (AP).—Doctors testified today of expulsion from their professional societies in Oregon because they had treated patients of prepaid hospital programs.

They were among a parade of prosecution witnesses in the Government's antimonopoly suit against the Oregon Medical Society. The socfety is accused of seeking to monopolize prepaid medical service bills through its own Oregon Physicians' Service.

Industrial workers and employers testified society members had refused to accept payment from services to which they subscribed.

Dr. Leon V. Belnap, Portland, said he was expelled from the Multnomah County, the State and national medical societies because he accepted patients of the National Hospital Association. He said the late Dr. C. G. Sabin was also expelled. Dr. Belnap said Dr. Sabin was also asked not to seek re-election to a hospital staff which he had headed for many years.

Dr. C. Harold Palmer, still a member of the society, testified he and a few others had resisted expulsion. He said this was in 1940. He said the society asked him not to service subscribers of the National Hospital Association. Dr. Palmer said the society gave the reason that the association was among unethical groups. He testified his answer was "I didn't care to bite the hand that's been feeding me for 25 years."

Threats of expulsion were blamed by C. H. Weston, formerly head of the Oregon Medical Service, Inc., for loss of staff physicians. He said their resignations forced his organization to close down in 1939-40. He named two physicians who resigned because of threats.

More Medical Items Exempted From Sales Tax

A ruling which will mean exemption of more medical items from District sales tax regulations was announced yesterday by Sales Tax Administrator Allan F. Brooke.

In addition to those originally exempted, the new ruling exempts any other medicine, pharmaceutical or drug "which is so prepared as to be adaptable for . . . use internally, or by physically applying the same . . . externally in order to penetrate the skin." It will not apply to any unmedicated substance.

The original regulation exempted only items listed in certain official publications. Purpose of the ruling, Brooke said, was to provide for exemption of items marketed between publication.

British Present Jet Engine to U. S.

London, Oct. 26 (AP).—One of the two engines that powered the world's first successful jet airplane was presented to the United States today. It will be placed in the Smithsonian Institution in Washington.

The engine, presented by Power Jets Ltd., government-owned company that was started by Sir Frank Whittle, inventor of jets, was accepted by Don C. Bliss, councillor for economic affairs of the American Embassy.

The engine's twin was given to the British government to be placed in the science museum in London.

Test Pilot Bails Out At 500 MPH and Lives

Poundridge, N. Y., Oct. 26 (U.P.). A test pilot bailed out of a jet plane going more than 500 miles an hour today and lived.

Jack Bade, 30, Republic Aviation Corp. test pilot from Massapequa, N. Y., took to his parachute when he lost control of his Thunderjet F-84 as he was descending from the 12,000-foot level.

A Republic pilot successfully bailed out at that speed a year ago.

New Synthetic Fiber Resists Heat and Acid

Wilmington, Del., Oct. 26 (AP).—A 22-million-dollar investment in a new synthetic fiber that eventually may become part of skirts and ships and auto tops and chimney screens and tents was disclosed today by E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Co.

Orlon is its name.

Commercial production is scheduled to start late next year in a new plant under construction at Camden, S. C. Capacity output will be reached in 1951. If the product is as successful as the company's researchers believe, other plants will be built.

Du Pont officials listed orlon's major advantages as: Resistance to sun, heat and acids; durability, warmth, ease of laundering, light weight, non-shrinking.

Spokesmen for the company left no doubt of their faith in the new fiber, which in its development is akin to nylon, du Pont's earlier major success in the chemical yarn field. They were enthusiastic about its possibilities.

They said orlon—not meant as a trade name—will in no way supplant nylon. Nylon production in three du Pont plants—at Chattanooga, Tenn.; Martinsville, Va., and Seaford, Del.—is at "an all-time high."

"Although eventually the two fibers will compete in certain areas, orlon is intended largely, and at first anyway, for different things," a spokesman said.

Those things will include automobile tops, tents, tarpaulins, filter cloths for chimneys, which it is thought will greatly help cities reduce smoke blight, and a lot of other industrial fabrics.

Company spokesmen said orlon has proved to be the most resistant of all man-made fibers.

Slightly heavier than nylon, it is described as being, in one form, the most silklike of the synthetics and in another the most like wool.

Orlon fabric is said to wash as easily as nylon, and dry almost as quickly. It holds shape even after a drenching. It doesn't shrink and is moth-proof. A lighted cigarette will not set it aflame.

An anonymous Capitol telephone operator was credited yesterday with the rescue of Chester W. Carney, 48, overcome by cleaning fluid fumes as he worked in the Capitol about 5 p. m.

Color TV Takeoff Fails to Amuse FCC

By The Associated Press

The Allen B. DuMont Laboratories staged a burlesque of color television conversion problems before the Federal Communications Commission yesterday. The demonstration got a lot of laughs before Chairman Wayne Coy called it off as a "sideshow."

DuMont's chief engineer said the demonstration was intended to show such conversions are "ridiculous."

After fuses were blown out and the Du Mont engineers suggested the commissioners move back from the machine before it went into high gear, Coy snapped sternly:

"We are not in the sideshow business. This demonstration is called off."

Use Color Wheel

DuMont, a leader in the television field, contends no color TV system is ready for general use, and that converting present receivers to color reception is not as simple as some have contended.

It chose for the purpose a DuMont-built extension of the Columbia Broadcasting System's color plan, involving a motor-driven color wheel, which to convert a present set would be locked into place before the viewing screen.

A de luxe $2500 cabinet model with a 20-inch screen was selected for the demonstration, which went forward over Columbia's protests that it had never recommended the color wheel for anything larger than a 12½-inch tube.

CBS Attorney Richard S. Salant accused DuMont of setting up "a publicity gag at considerable expense."

Dr. Thomas T. Goldsmith, chief engineer at DuMont, said, however, his company believed color conversion should be available for large or small sets if color should be authorized and that his laboratories therefore had built equipment necessary for a 20-inch receiver.

When this was unveiled it turned out to be a steel-housed color wheel 4 feet in diameter, powered with a 5-horsepower motor mounted on a heavy platform. It weighed about 700 pounds and overshadowed the set it was to convert.

As two husky young men wheeled it into place, Dr. Goldsmith said "this is what the housewife would have to do to change from a black-and-white to a color program.

Connections then were set up with heavy power lines in the Commerce Department auditorium. It was at this point that Goldsmith asked the commissioners to move back and Coy called a halt to the performance.

Commissioner Frieda B. Hennock, addressing Dr. Allen B. DuMont, said:

"You can ridicule anything when you don't meet the issue. CBS has gone to the trouble to produce a color system and you have not."

Later Dr. Goldsmith said:

"We just got sick and tired of all the claims about easy conversions of present receivers to CBS-type color and decided to show folks how ridiculous such conversions really are."

The Lyon's Den

By Leonard Lyons

NEW YORK.—At Mayor O'Dwyer's luncheon for President Truman at Gracie Mansion, A. H. Feller, the counsel to the United Nations, introduced Stanley Woodward to the municipal officials. "Mr. Woodward," said Feller, "is Chief of Protocal at the State Department." The officials looked puzzled . . . "Chief of Protocol," Woodward told them, "is just diplomatic lingo for 'Grover Whalen'."

The executive director of the United Negro College Fund conferred with John D. Rockefeller, jr., honorary chairman of the fund, and reported that the fund needed new quarters—that its present offices were overcrowded and would have to be moved. Rockefeller gave him a piece of paper on which was written an address in the E. 70s, and suggested: "Take a look at this house, and see if it will do" . . . The director was busy the next few days, and by the time he saw the house the superintendent told him: "Sorry, but it was sold yesterday" . . . He reported back to Rockefeller: "That house you sent me to see is ideal for us, but it was sold" . . . "I know," said Rockefeller. "I bought it."

An American who recently visited the ancestral manor of a British Duke heard him complain about the Labor Government's programs which left him with a meager annual income. "Nevertheless," the visitor consoled him, "you have this vast estate, your fine horses, you have enough food—God is good to you" . . . "God would like to be good to me," replied the Duke, "but the Labor Government won't let Him."

SUSIE Q. SMITH

"You'll find that lipstick will come off easier if you wet your handkerchief, Mr. Smith."

Action Against A. & P. Assailed by Truckers

Boston, Oct. 26 (AP).—The American Trucking Associations, Inc., today assailed the Justice Department's anti-trust action against the Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co.

It approved a resolution stating the opposition of the group to any move to break up the A. and P. on the ground it would involve "serious legal entanglements" and hurt the business of trucks carrying A. and P. merchandise.

The resolution also said the association would give the A. and P. legal aid in its defense, "if necessary."

THE MAN WHO—

The Family Scrapbook

By Dr. Ernest G. Osborne

Home Phone

Almost certainly you've seen one of those cartoons showing a youngster of 14 or 15 years of age talking over the phone. Probably he or she was stretched out in some almost impossible position and it was clear that the phoning had been going on for some time.

Many a parent finds very little humor in such a cartoon. It's too close to home. Night after night Junior or Junior Miss has cuddled up to the family phone carrying on endless conversations with boy or girl friends. And it seems to be a pretty nearly universal pattern. Few homes escape it.

It's important for youngsters in their early adolescence to learn to get along well with the other growing boys and girls. These telephone marathons, foolish as they sometimes seem to be, are one way through which they build up belongingness in their group. Our young people should not be forbidden nor even discouraged too strongly in this pursuit.

We can expect cooperation, however, as far as the use of the family phone is concerned. Youngsters will recognize the fairness of yielding it up when others in the family have real need for it. One shouldn't, of course, try to think up calls merely for the purpose of cutting off an exasperatingly long conversation. Talking over the situation calmly usually will lead to some reasonably satisfactory compromise.

What's the Verdict?

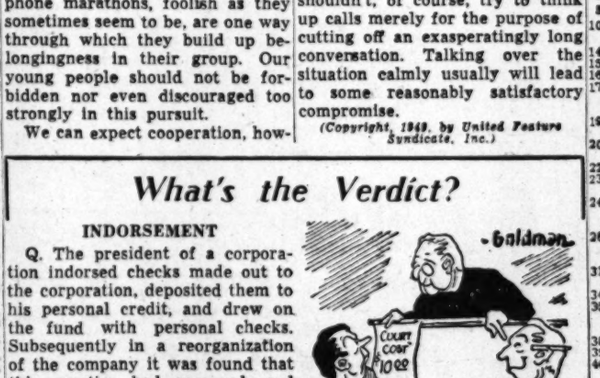
INDORSEMENT

Q. The president of a corporation indorsed checks made out to the corporation, deposited them to his personal credit, and drew on the fund with personal checks. Subsequently in a reorganization of the company it was found that this practice had occurred, and the corporation sues the bank for the money thus drawn by the president. Is the bank liable?

A. Considering the volume of their daily transactions, banks are held to an almost unreasonably strict standard of knowledge of their customers' affairs. Since the checks were made out to the corporation, the personal indorsement by the president, with deposit in his own account, would be improper. The bank would be accountable to the corporation for the money thus misused. This would be true even if the bank knew the corporation president was a majority stockholder . . . F. L. D.

Cases discussed illustrate general principles. They should not be construed as legal advice in particular cases. Take your legal problems to your lawyer.

NAPOLEON



GEE, UNCLE ELBY! THIS IS AWFUL! SINCE EVERYBODY'S FOUND OUT NAPOLEON PAINTED THOSE PICTURES WITH HIS TAIL, THEY DON'T BUY 'EM ANYMORE AND IT'S BROUGHT BACK HIS INFERIORITY COMPLEX! HE LETS RABBITS CHASE HIM AGAIN!

My Wife and I

My wife is very fond of me . . . And I am very fond of her . . . But there are things that she enjoys . . . And those that I prefer . . . And she would like to have her way . . . When I am wanting mine . . . And that is why our moods and plans . . . Are never quite in line . . . She wants to sit and talk with me . . . When I would rather write . . . And when I sleep I wish that she . . . Would please put out the light . . . She windowshops when I am in . . . A hurry to get home . . . And when she hugs an easy chair . . . I get the urge to roam . . . It seems we never quite agree . . . On when to work or play . . . And yet somehow we get along . . . And stay in love each day.

THE DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

Pretty Good Wisecrack, Relatively Speaking

Frank J. Woodsmall of 3937 1st st. sw. is having brother-in-law trouble. He complains:

"My brother-in-law, Walter Silvester, refers to me as: 'Surly, with the fringe on top.'"

NAMES IS NAMES

The roster of recently elected directors of the Yale Club of Washington reveals that the local sons of Eli not only have a Legg (E. Kent, '34) and a Foote (Edward A., '27) to stand on, but if they ever get tired, they can lean on their Mace (A. Wilbur, '06).

PERSONAL NOTES

Bernice M. Willey, Lanham, Md.: The story had a happy ending after all. She stopped in to see me the next day and told me she had not kept the blind date, because my warning had frightened her. But it certainly is a sad commentary on modern times when a 12-year-old girl is permitted to run loose, and come so close to real trouble.

APPROPRIATE?

Don Garrett of 4334 N. Fairfax dr., Arlington, Va., wonders whether we've heard about WJPR in Greenville, Miss. The station advertises:

"WJPR—We Just Play Records."

MAIL BAG

Dear Bill:

Will you give the Red Feather campaign a hand?

A truly unprecedented number of men and women are now ringing doorbells in the 1950 Community Chest campaign.

But even more volunteers are needed, particularly in the residential sections, to put this project over the top.

Could you use a shortie in your District Line asking prospective solicitors to contact Miss Marjorie Collins at Metropolitan 2284? She can steer them, so they won't get lost in the organizational maze.

Kay Glass,
Director, Public Relations,
United Community Services.

Dear Kay:

You're trying to get me thrown out of the house.

My wife is one of the campaign's minor straw-bosses in our neighborhood, and she's been conducting a persistent propaganda campaign for the past week: "Just one little item, to get me some more volunteers."

But I've turned her down, with a pat little speech about not using the column for personal problems. This invariably brings a heated retort that getting enough workers to make the Chest campaign a success is not a personal problem; but I've stood firm.

Now you want me to do for a stranger what I have refused to do for my own wife.

You don't care whose happy home you bust up, do you?

Bill

THOSE "SPONTANEOUS" DEMONSTRATIONS

Some time ago David Kandel wrote a little jingle wondering whether traffic was permitted to make right turns in Moscow. Dorothy Eleanor replies:

In Moscow, Comrade Kandel,
Behind the iron stockades,
They have no traffic problem:
Those streets are for parades.

GIVE-AWAYS

"Cute little gray Maltese kitten, 2 months old; eats anything." (Shepherd 7990.)

ADD DEFINITIONS

The auditor of a large local firm will be interested to know that employes there call their expense accounts "gyp slips."

SHAGGY CAT STORY

John A. Ward, jr., of 5112 Kansas ave. nw. is a Shaggy Dog Story fancier who knows a switch when he encounters one.

For example, there's the one about the fellow whose car gets stuck in the mud.

Another motorist stops and offers to help, but the guy who's stuck declines with thanks, fetches two kittens out of the car, and hitches them to the front bumper.

"Hey," says the other motorist. "You can't pull that car out of there with two little kittens."

"Oh, no?" replies our hero with a note of triumph in his voice. "I'll have you know I've got a whip, too."

INFANTICIPATORY ITEM

Nathan Green of 2419 Dexter ave., Silver Spring, Md., passes along the story about the recently married fellow who was filling out his income tax blank.

After claiming the usual deduction for his wife, he came to the space reserved for exemptions for minor dependents and slyly wrote:

"Watch this space."

Listen to the District Line on the air Monday through Friday at 1:30 p. m., over WRC.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

FDR's Grandson Has That Smile

By Drew Pearson

Congressman Franklin D. Roosevelt, jr., has an 8-year-old son named Christopher who may turn out to be another chip off the old block. Recently Congressman Roosevelt called his son on the telephone in New York and asked him if he would like to come to Washington. Christopher said he would under certain conditions.

FDR, JR.

"If I come to Washington will I be able to see the President?" asked Christopher.

"I think so," replied Congressman Roosevelt.

"Well," continued Christopher, "will he let us sleep in our own beds in the White House?"

Roosevelt roared.

When Christopher arrived in Washington, his father drove him around the Capital, then tried to park to go inside a Government building. Only a tiny space was available, so Roosevelt asked a policeman if he could park in a restricted area. The policeman, noting FDR, jr.'s congressional license plate, said okay. As Roosevelt and his son got out of the car, Christopher turned on the traditional Roosevelt grin, looked up to the policeman and said:

"Officer, meet my Congressman."

Insurance Lobby

Congressman Walter A. Lynch, New York Democrat, and a conscientious member of the Ways and Means Committee, will head a subcommittee to investigate an important loophole in the tax laws whereby life insurance companies do not pay income taxes.

The life insurance companies—with admitted assets of more than 50 billions and investments in practically every kind of business—paid not a dime in income taxes to the Federal Government for 1947 and 1948. And they will pay none for 1949.

Despite months of negotiations with tax experts in the Treasury Department, spokesmen for the insurance companies have refused to agree to a recommendation for even a token "stopgap" tax payment of 45 million dollars a year for 1948 and 1949—even though going "scot free" for 1947.

At present the $1,500,000,000 annual net investment income of life insurance companies is not taxed—either as to the company or as to the policyholders. The job of the Lynch committee is to decide what taxes should be collected, and then to prepare legislation to close the loophole in the present law. The committee has to do all this in the face of a lobby considerably more powerful than the real estate, oil or public utility lobbies.

It will be interesting to see how Congressman Lynch makes out in his lonely battle against the giants.

Neutral Nehru

Some people were disappointed when Prime Minister Nehru of India issued his statement that India would take no sides in the cold war. In view of India's strategic position between the East and the West, his words fell with the unwelcome reverberation of a rock on a polished ballroom floor.

Nehru's neutrality, however, was not news to State Department officials who invited him to this country and who knew that, as between the Russians and the British, Nehru had spent most of his life fearing the British. To change this suspicion of the western world was specifically why they invited him.

Nehru spent 13 years in a British jail, considers Russians more Asiatic than European, governs a people who are not much more than one rice bowl ahead of starvation. Instinctively, Indians think of Russia as having a higher standard of living than theirs and are less fearful of the Soviet than of their old rulers, the British.

United States diplomats don't expect to change this point of view overnight, realize that Nehru couldn't possibly announce, while here, that he will lead an anti-Soviet bloc in the middle of Asia.

But after he returns to India, they hope that gradually he can line up his country on the side of the United States.

Note—Nehru and Secretary of Defense Johnson became great friends while Johnson served as special ambassador to India. That is why Nehru is spending a weekend with Johnson at White Sulphur Springs, W. Va.

Capital News Capsules

White House and strikes—All sorts of pressure has been brought on President Truman to intervene in the steel and coal strikes, including appeals from such powerful Democratic leaders as Mayor David Lawrence of Pittsburgh, Jack Arvey of Chicago, and Chairman Boyle of the Democratic National Committee. They wanted him at least to issue a statement asking the steel companies to accept the findings of his own fact-finding board . . . Congressman Ray Madden of Indiana, one of those who appealed, told Truman that idle steelworkers in Gary, Ind., will be forced into breadlines unless the coal and steel strikes are settled soon. Many small business firms will have to close their doors if the strikes last much longer, Madden reported.

Brown Sugar Too Much For Amiable Horse

Chicago (U.P.)—Mrs. Sandra Dobbelaere knows now that a certain horse dislikes brown sugar.

Mrs. Dobbelaere occasionally gave a lump of white sugar to her milkman's horse.

"Can't understand it," the milkman said. "He's usually got such good manners."
